MURDER'S MYSTERY

Eastman Says Mrs. Woodill Was Killed by Jealous Woman.

WRITES HIS WIFE OF TRAGEDY

Says He Made Away With Body to Save Himself and Decided on Suicide—The Story Appears to be Incredable.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

St. Michaels, Md., June 26.—Tell-tale shafts of light continued today to filter in upon the tragedy of the lonely bungalow of Broad Creek. As the tangled skeins of the story are picked up one by one they tend more and more to dissipate the claim advanced by Robert Eastman that it was a woman and not he who killed Edith May Woodill.

Today the jewels worn by the woman at the time of her disappearance were found in a pawn shop in Baltimore, placed there last Tuesday by a man who answered fully the description of Eastman. The man secured $200 on the two diamond rings and an oriental pearly brooch. Two hundred dollars which Mrs. Woodill had in her possession when she left her foster father's home last week is missing. Eastman repaid a loan last week of $200 and when he returned here from Baltimore on Tuesday he seemed plentifully supplied with money.

In all of the strange phases of this most extraordinary cases there has been no more weired feature than the burial late tonight of the body of Eastman in a grave beneath the scrubby pines of his own farm and near the unfinished bungalow where Mrs. Woodill was done to death. No church yard of the Eastern Shore would open its gates to Eastman. Superstitious negroes of the community refused to dig his grave. Two white laborers were finally induced to undertake the task.

There promised for a time today to be a fight for the legal custody of Eastman's body. A. S. Rosenthal, of New York, an attorney who represented Eastman when he was charged with grand larceny, and who secured for him the bail which he forfeited by flight, arrived upon the scene and acting for Mrs. Ida S. Ecstein, of New York, one of the sureties who lost heavily by the forfeiture of the bond, demanded the custody of the body in order that he might make delivery of it to the New York authorities by whom a reward of $1,500 had been offered. The local authorities declined to give up the body.

The letter of the suicide in which he gave to his wife his version of the killing of Mrs. Woodill by a jealous woman, was made public today and deeply impressed many who read its circumstantial account of the tragedy, for which the writer claimed he was in no way responsible. The letter follows:

"Vinnie:

"Take this money and go at once to McDaniel, Talbot county, Maryland, and claim my body and all my property. The property consists of 22 acres of land and a bungalow. There is also a motor boat. Have a sale and convert the whole thing into cash. I don't owe a cent excepting for the paint and pump, etc., which Shanahan & Wrighton, of Easton, will be glad to get back, as it is not broken, just as it was shipped.

"Little girl, I had no hand in the tragedy. Was there and removed the evidence after the other two couples fled. I did this for self preservation and am haunted. The victim was my particular friend and we were well mated. Have only known her three weeks. We all, that is, two men and two other women from Annapolis, went to the bungalow for a time. Ev-

AFFAIRS AT LUMBERTON

Croatan Missionary Preparing to Leave Country—Marriage Announcement—Excursion This Week—Personal Notes.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Lumberton, N. C., June 26.—We are reliably informed that Rev. Sam B. Stephens, the missionary among the Croatans, who has made himself so unpopular here by trying to encourage social equality, has decided to leave for some other place, and would have been gone already but for the fact that he is under bond for appearance at a magistrate's court here next week, charged with being implicated in the assault on young Mr. Prevatt last week by a Croatan.

The case was to have been heard last Saturday but the young man was unable to attend trial. The missionary has been making his home, it is said, with the family of a Croatan, but while he seems to be trying to live as he teaches, there are very few of the race who approve of his style. We are told that one witness stated here last Saturday during the mayor's court, when three men were arrested for assaulting the preacher, that he had been telling them this country all belonged to them before the white man arrived and that the government should pay them for it; further he stated that the Crotans were entitled to one of the county offices and if they would stick to him he would see that they got their rights. The Croatans know who their friends are and are not foolish enough to believe such rot as he is said to have tried to give them.

The most interesting event of the season is the approaching marriage of Mr. H. M. McAllister, cashier of the First National Bank, of Lumberton, and Miss Elsie Ramsey, of Monroe, which takes place in that city next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McAllister, father and mother of the groom-to-be, together with his brothers, and Mrs. W. P. McAllister and several other friends from here will go to Monroe. Mr. A. P. McAllister will be best man. After an extended trip North the young couple will return to Lumberton about July 10th. Mr. McAllister has the best wishes of a large circle of friends here. Lumberton will extend to his bride a most cordial welcome.

The attention of a lady, living three miles from town, was attracted one day this week, to a round object near her house, which resembled that of a cat in a choked or strangled condition. She began to investigate and a short distance away discovered a small animal of the same kind standing on its hind feet, seemingly in great distress. She noticed also a house cat seated near by. She hurriedly procured a gun from the house and killed the strange looking animal. She sent her little son to bring in what she had shot, but before reaching it he stopped and began screaming. He had found the cause of all of the commotion, which proved to be an unusual large snake of the coachwhip variety. The snake was killed by a man who was passing. The little animal which had been killed by the lady proved to be a mink. The cat escaped unhurt. It is supposed that the snake had both the cat and the mink charmed when his game was broken up.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Charlotte, N. C., June 26.—After being out exactly four and one-half hours the jury in the case of Will Biggers for the murder of J. G. Hood this afternoon returned a verdict of not guilty.

The announcement of the verdict was greeted with cheers, the court room being transformed into a scene of wild confusion. Women, friends and relatives of the prisoner crowded around him and wept from sheer joy. When Judge Council had succeeded in restoring order he thanked the jurors for their work and adjourned court.

TARIFF SCHEDULES

Senate Failed to Conclude Consideration of All.

PROTECTION FOR WOODPULP

Relations Against Canada Provided. No Freed Agricultural Implements—Laces and Embroideries Taxed 10 Per Cent.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Washington, June 26.—Although it devoted almost eight hours to strenuous effort in that direction, the Senate today failed to conclude its consideration of the schedules of the tariff bill, and when at 5:15 o'clock an adjournment was reached there were still a number of important rates to be determined. The day, however, was full of achievement and a number of provisions were disposed of.

Among the more important questions which received attention were agricultural implements, wood pulp, cash registers, litnographic plates, laces and jute yarns.

Probably the most exciting incident of the day was the vote on Senator Beveridge's amendment reducing from 30 per cent ad valorem to 15 per cent. ad valorem the duty on cash registers. The Indiana Senator began his fight for this reduction some days ago, and was enabled to force a vote on it today after comparatively little discussion. The vote resulted 31 ayes and 33 noes.

Stating that after the vote was announced that several Senators had informed him that they had voted against his motion under a misrepresentatition, Mr. Beveridge said he would renew the motion at a later date.

The wood pulp provision also again received attention and it was supposed that it had been finally acted upon until Senator Clapp taking exception to the retaliatory provision of the schedule as amended stated that he would make an effort to have the provision entirely elimnated before final action should be taken upon the bill. Today's amendments were in lieu of all previous Senate changes in the schedule. They were suggested by Senator Brown, of Nebraska, and provide for the free importation of mechanically ground wood pulp except from countries which place obstacles in the way of their exportation of wood pulp to the United States, when, proclamation of the President, a duty of 1-2 of one cent a pound be imposed. Retaliation is also provided against countries exporting chemical pulp or newspaper print paper into the United States. No secret is made of the fact that these provisions for retaliation are aimed at Canada.

Much of the time was given to the discussion of a motion by Senator Bacon placing agricultural implements on the free list but after much discussion it was rejected by the decisive vote of 26 to 45.

In connection with this amendment Senators Stone and Davis made long speeches, the former attacking the International Harvester Company as a trust, the latter speaking in general disapprobation of the protective system. Mr. Stone declared that the Department of Justice was asleep.

Other changes made during the day were as follows:

Increasing to 2 and 4 cents a pound the duty on hemp; providing for the free importation under 1912 of linen manufacturing machines; increasing to the extent of about ten per cent. over the present law the duties on laces and embroideries; imposing a duty of 50 per cent. on engraved lithographic plates, slightly decreasing the duty on jute yarn, striking from the free list the products of petroleum, and elimination the House retailiation provision regarding wrapper and filler tobacco.

Washington, June 26.—A lively colloquy took place in the Senate today between Mr. Overman, of North Carolina, and Mr. Smith of Michigan, on the attitude of the North Carolina cotton manufacturers toward the tariff. Mr. Smith claimed that three Congressional districts of the Old North State had embraced the protective tariff principles in the last election.

"Yes," retorted the North Carolina Senator, "they believed you were going to revise the tariff downward. I heard it all over the State."

Mr. Overman insisted that the North Carolina manufacturers did not need or want any protective tariff.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Baltimore, June 26.—C. H. Hix has been appointed general manager and C. R. Capps freight traffic manager of the Seaboard Air Line railroad with headquarters in Portsmouth, Va. These important changes in the organization, as announced today officially, follow the recent resignations of W. A. Garrett, chief executive officer for the receivers, and L. Sevier, vice president, both of these positions having been abolished.

SEARCH FOR LING

Fleeing Chinaman Was in Newark on Day of Sigel Murder.

CLEARING UP THE MYSTERY

Coroner's Jury Says Murder Was Not Premeditated—Chu Gain Denies He Married Elsie Sigel. Gotham Police Alert.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 26.—The New York police confirmed tonight the new phase of the Sigel murder case brought to light in Newark, N. J., today—that Leon Ling was in Newark early in the afternoon of the day of the murder with a trunk like the one in which the body was found on his hands and a pressing anxiety to leave the trunk in the Newark restaurant of Li Sing, but prundent Li Sing would not hear of having the trunk dumped on him.

The mystery of just how Elsie Sigel was killed was cleared up to some extent with the announcement of the result of the coroner's autopsy, supporting in a way that the murder was not premeditated but committed on the spur of the moment by the jealous, crazed Chinaman. Mr. O'Hanlon, of the coroner's office, said tonight that there had been found no ruptured blood vessels such as always accompany death by violent strangulation, but that on the other hand there was evidence of congestion of the lungs such as always goes with death by asphyxiation. The analysis of the contents of the stomach is not yet complete and on account of the advanced state of decomposition in which the body was found, it has presented many difficulties.

There is absolutely no confirmation of the statement made to the police by a clerical friend of the Sigel family that Elsie ever married Chu Gain, Leon Ling's rival, who is held under bond as a material witness. Chu Gain protested that he has sorrows enough without being made out a widower.

The district attorney's office today said Ong Fung, an English speaking Chinaman, up for a little quiz on the Chinese tongs and their possible affiliations with the case. Ong Fung told the authorities that nothing was known in Chinatown to connect Leon with either of the tongs and that apart from his membership in the Chinese Masons (which the Masons deny) the only other society to which he belonged was the Four Brothers, which embraced all the descendants of four fabled demi-gods who lived in the cloudy days before even Chinese history began, and who gathered for nothing more violent than to vaunt their descent.

Arrest in Tennessee.

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—A Chinaman answering the description of Leon Ling charged with the murder of Elsie Sigel, is reported arrested at Jackson, Tenn., tonight.

GEORGIA'S NEW EXECUTIVE

Joseph M. Brown Became Governor Yesterday—Smith Retires.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Atlanta, Ga., June 26.—Joseph M. Brown, son of "Joe" Brown, one of Georgia's war time Governors, took office today amid ceremonies of Jeffersonian simplicity.

On arrival from Marietta Mr. Brown quickly passed into the Capital building and there in the Governor's reception room was met by Hoke Smith the retiring Governor, his bitter political enemy. When Governor Smith took office two years ago one of his first acts was to remove from office "Joe" Brown, then a State railroad commissioner. Brown's campaign against Smith a year ago and his victory was a political sensation.

Governor Brown's address was brief. At its conclusion Governor Smith handed Governor Brown the seal of the State of Georgia and the ceremony was complete. Governor Smith bowed as he handed over the seal. He did not shake hands or offer any public congratulations to his successor. A reception in the Capital followed and later Governor Brown and his family took the train back to Marietta. Next week they will take up their residence in the Governor's mansion in this city.

Governor Smith's last official act today was the signing of 15 pardons. Those set free included six murderers and three persons convicted of violation of the prohibition laws.

GOVERNOR ON PROHIBITION

Gives Out Statement in Reply to Inquiry of Rev. Will B. Oliver, of Florence—State Veterinarians at Wrightsville.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., June 26.—"There is not a county in the State spending as much money for, or consuming as much whiskey as before prohibition, and not the slightest probability that the next Legislature will repeal the law, prohibition sentiment being sounder and stronger than heretofore" is a notable paragraph in a letter given out by Governor Kitchin addressed to Rev. Will B. Oliver, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Florence, S. C., who sent the Governor a published interview with James M. Allen, Jr., of Goldsboro in the Florence Times in which assertions were made that North Carolina business was demoralized by prohibition; labor demoralized and the negroes engaged as "blind tigers;" the law unsupported by public sentiment and working for corruption and evil; drunkenness more prevalent; more money expended for liquor and sentiment growing to return to local option policy. Answering inquiry and charges more fully the Governor says: "Business in the State is sound and progressive as in any adjoining State. Prohibition has not demoralized labor. It is true some negroes and some white men are violating the prohibition law and the courts are constantly sending them to the roads. Considering the profits, violations are not beyond what the prohibitionists expected. The law is supported by public sentiment and is a great benefit to the State, though, of course, there are many good citizens who opposed purohibition, and who still doubt its efficiency and wisdom. It is, however, doubtless working as well and as satisfactorily here as in any State in the union."

The Governor characterizes the Allen interv'ew as "grossly misleading" and declares as to conditions in Goldsboro, order and soberness is wonderfully improved. This in answer to charges by Allen that there was more drunkenness in Goldsboro now than he ever saw before with jug trains and the express company doing a big business, 65 gallons of liquor a day being a dull shipment for Goldsboro.

The programme for the eighth annual convention of the North Carolina Veterinary Medical Association at Wrightsville Beach, Friday, July 2nd, is just perfected and includes papers by Dr. W. G. Chrisman, Raleigh, "Milk Fever and its Peculiarities;" Dr. J. S. Butler, Raleigh, on "Acute Indigestion;" Dr. T. M. [illegible]on, "Tick Eradication in North Carolina;" Dr. G. A. Roberts, "Production of Hog Cholera Serum;" Dr. J. W. Hartman, "Efficiency of the Tuberculin Test;" Dr. Adam Fisher, "Laws Regulating Veterinary Practice;" Dr. J. W. Petty, Durham, "Glanders"; Dr. Watt Ashcraft, Monroe, "Lameness and Horse Shoeing."

The State Board of examiners will examine all applicants for license to practice during the morning of July 2nd.

Dr. W. S. Rankin, Wake Forest, spent the day here making preliminary arrangements for entering on his new duties as secretary of the State Board of Health July 1st, succeeding Dr. R. H. Lewis with a view to devoting his whole time to the duties of the secretaryships.

NOW UP TO ARBITRATORS.

To Settle Firemen's Strike in Georgia. Arguments Completed.

Atlanta, Ga., June 26.—With testimony and arguments completed the board of arbitration in the Georgia Railroad strike tonight took under consideration what its ward shall be.

Argument on the strike of Georgia Railroad firemen for seniority of whites over negroes were begun today before the arbitration board, which is to settle the strike.

In Washington yesterday two negroes, J. E. Shepperd, of Durham, N. C., and Dr. J. E. Dellinger, of Greensboro, N. C., asked President Taft to appoint as Minister to China a Southern white man whose name they declined to make public.

HYLAND WON IN 41ST ROUND

Leach Cross Fought Gamely and Was Floored Fiften Times—Proved a Sensational Battle—Had Advantage Awhile.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

San Francisco, June 26.—"Fight Dick" Hyland knocked out Leach Cross, of New York, in the 41st round of a scheduled 45-round battle at the Colma arena this afternoon. The fight was one of the most sensational of modern ring history and was characterized by the gameness and recuperative powers of the New York pugilist dentist. He was floored fully 15 times during the contest and after the 25th round fought practically on the defensive only.

This was Cross' initial battle on California soil and the first time he had fought over ten rounds. For the first ten rounds he was the acme of coolness. His great cleverness gave him the advantage of the earlier rounds and it looked for a time as though he would out-point and out-box his rugged antagonist.

In one of the fastest exhibitions seen on the local grounds this season, Goldsboro took the third game of the series with Wilmington on the home grounds yesterday afternoon, score 3 to 1 in eleven innings. Wilmington scored her only run in the fourth session after two were down when Jayes placed a neat one to right, stole second, took third on a muff of throw to catch him and came home on a wild throw to third while Kite was at bat. With both teams playing right on the jump, that score looked like the game and neither side was able to break it up until the 11th when Smith led off with a single to centre, Gettig bunted safely, Sharp was out pitcher to second at first, and Crockett singled to right, homing Smith and Gettig. The game in detail follows:

First—Smith flew to second; Gettig and Sharp to centre. Wilmington: Hemp and Nichols flew to left; Smith safe on error of third and went to second on bad throw to first, while the Oriole was out, short to first.

Second—Crockett safe on bungling error of short, but Steinbach and Doak flew out on beautiful fielding of Jayes; Stubbe followed with a two-base hit to deep left, but Fulton fanned furiously at three of Levy's finest. Wilmington: Levy led off with a nice one to left; Sharp advanced him to second; Jayes flew to short, and hope fled when Kite flew to Doak.

Third—Stoehr started a run with a single to centre, was sacrificed by Smith; Gettig flying to Jayes, but Sharp retiring the side with nothing doing, short to first. Wilmington: Conn flew to Gettig. Hemp out on beautiful stop of Sharp to first; Nichols safe on error of Gettig and stole second; Smith was hit by pitched ball, Brodie flew long to right.

Fourth—Crockett out, Levy to first; Steinbach was hit by a pitched ball but was called back to bat and got four balls; Doak hit to second and was out at first, Steinbach being caught on fast throw, Nichols to third. Wilmington: Levy flew to right; Sharp out, catcher to first; Jayes singled to right and stole second, Kite up and Jayes got third on muff throw to second, and scored on wild throw, second to third; Kite was then out, short to first.

Fifth—Stubbe hit to right and was safe on excusable error of Sharp, was sacrificed by Fulton and Stoehr, scoring on Smith's single to left; Gettig singled past second; Sharp up and Smith was caught at second, Levy to Hemp. Wilmington: Conn fanned; Hemp singled to right; Nichols forced him at second; Smith up and Nichols was caught trying second.

Sixth—Sharp out ,third to first; Crockett flew to Sharp; Steinbach out, second to first. Wilmington: Smith fanned; Brodie out, third to first; Levy short to first.

Seventh—Doak out, short to first; Stubbe walked; Fulton hit to short and the side was retired on a fast double, Hemp to Sharp to Nichols. Wilmington: Sharp out, short to first; Jayes hit to left for two bases, but Kite popped out to second, Conn fanned marooning Jayes on second.

Eighth—Stoehr fanned; Smith drew a pass, Gettig up and Smith was caught at second after bad throw of Kite; Gettig flew to Smith. Wilmington: Hemp failed on a nice bunt; Nichols out, third to first; Smith walked and stole second; Brodie singled to left and Smith was caught at home on punk decision of Barr.

Ninth—Sharp flew to Jayes, who jumped up and cut off a two-base hit; Crockett flew out to second; Steinbach singled to left; Doak flew to Jayes. Wilmington: Levy flew to short; Sharp singled to left; Jayes flew to Gettig and Sharp was doubled at first.

Tenth—Stubbe out, third to first; Fulton popped out to Kite; Stoehr fanned. Wilmington: Kite out, pitcher to first; Conn singled to left; Hemp up and Conn stole second; Hemp popped out to second; Nichols ended the hope by popping out to pitcher.

Eleventh—Smith singled to centre; Gettig bunted and both runners were

THE PROTECTION SWILL TROUGH

Judging from the tone of the North Carolina press the writers generally in their comments on the positions of Senators Simmons and Overman on the tariff, consider that they are on the job at Washington, doing the best they can and acting with good judgment on the facts as they see them in the line of their duty to North Carolina and the South. They may or may not be right in every instance, but there are a whole lot of people at home who believe they are doing the right thing under the grave responsibilities and perplexing problems which they have to face. Many differ with them honestly, a few intollerantly, but it will be found that most North Carolinians have confidence in their Senators and give them credit for judiciousness and good working horse sense.

When the North Carolina Senators come home to give an account of their stewardship they will come mighty near giving good and acceptable reasons for all that they have done. If we differed with them at all we would respectfully do so and yet retain confidence in them.

We always try to get along without throwing fits but it's everybody's privilege to have 'em if it suits them. We think, however, when the situation clears up there will be commendation for Senators Simmons and Overman for acting on their best judgment in seeing to it that there shall be no discrimination against the South in completing a tariff bill to be carried through by a Republican Senatorial majority determined on protection.

The North Carolina Senators, and those from some other Southern States as well, are seeing to it that high duties shall not be levied on the products of some sections at the expense of the Southern producer of the raw material. As producers of raw material and consumers of finished products, Southerners would be at a great disadvantage in paying duty profits to manufacturers while furnishing the raw material free. It would be, in the nature of the case, all going out and nothing coming in. Such a policy would deplete us and enrich the other fellow, but an equalization of tariff benefits as far as it can be done will not leave us at the mercy of protected manufacturers of our free raw material.

Protection benefits to be distributed by a Republican Congress elected with that fell purpose in view and carrying it out with a rush upward should not be confined to one section but should be distributed equally, or at least equitably, between the sections. When we reduce duties, they should also be reduced equitably so as not to affect one section to the disadvantage of another.

If the Democrats were in a majority in Congress we could carry out the Denver platform if it suited us, but as a Republican Senate and House is carrying out the opposition platform, Southern Senators and Representatives have to see to it that they do not carry out the protection programme to the disadvantage of the South. Senators Simmons and Overman see the point and are acting accordingly.

Some people have declared that protection is "legalized robbery" but if it is going to be legalized don't do it so all the loot will go to one corner of the Republic. The Star took this position when the game started and most of the leading papers in the South have agreed to the proposition. For instance, the Atlanta Constitution states the proposition ably and clearly when it says:

"From the very beginning of the tariff agitation The Constitution has taken the position that with the establishment of protection as the National policy, it would be as absurd as it would be unjust to place tariff duties upon practically all the products of one section of the country and put all those of another upon an equivalent of a free trade basis.

"Under a protective policy there is no sense or reason in a proposal that high duties should be placed upon all the products of New England, for example, and all tariff charges removed from those things peculiar to or found in largest quantity in the South.

"And yet, what is almost incomprehensible from any reasonable viewpoint, Southern Senators, Democratic in politics, have been roundly criticised, both North and South, not for demanding high protective rates, which they have consistently opposed, but for their support of what cannot reasonably be otherwise classed than as purely revenue rates upon products of this section.

"Discussing the situation in the light of recent developments, more particularly the support by the two Georgia Senators of a revenue duty upon iron ore, The Macon Telegraph accords precisely with the position which The Constitution has taken in this connection, as well as during the entire tariff struggle.

"There is no getting away from the fact that the country is to have, when Congress finally adjourns, a protective tariff, generally speaking, and in most of its schedules, will be, from the consumer's standpoint, no better than the law which it replaces. This admitted, is it too much to ask for a purely revenue tariff upon the products of certain Southern industries, when most of those of the East are weltering in the limit of protection?

"Or, should we, for the sake of a faith, accept all the burdens of tariff legislation, while its benefits go elsewhere?

"Common sense will dictate the reply and it is to the credit of certain Southern Senators that they have placed themselves in accord with it."

The Constitution says enough to justify everything that Senators Simmons and Overman have done and the people will do it too when they get next to the facts.

Finally, brethren, when the trough gets to overflowing with protection swill we want to see the South's nose in it along with New England. We don't want to see the South content to sit on its haunches and look gaunt while New England's paunch fairly drags the ground after deliriously gorging herself by herself and for herself.

FARM EXTENSION WORK.

The North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts is an institution that is progressive. It already has what is said to be the best textile department in connection with any college South or North, students having the advantage of training at the hands of experts directing instruction with actual spinning, weaving and knitting machinery on the grounds.

Now the A. & M. will get in touch with the farmer with a view to advancing agriculture on a scientific and practical basis. President Hill is confident that the man chosen for the new work of farm extension and college co-operation will accept the place. It is gratifying to note that the man is a North Carolinian, who is said to be peculiarly fitted for the proposed work of establishing and maintaining a system of co-operation between the college and the farms throughout North Carolina. Dr. Hill, the able and progressive head of this creditable State institution, regards this new movement as one of the most important that has been inaugurated in the college in years, and we are sure the people of the State will recognize its great value to agriculture and its signal benefits in the way of training young men for systematic work along that line.

President Hill also announces that the headquarters of Mr. C. R. Hudson for farm experiment work will be moved from Statesville to the college at Raleigh, thus giving the agricultural students the advantage of observing this work.

The Hon. William Jennings Bryan, of Lincoln, Nebraska, was in Denver Friday evening and delivered his new lecture on "The Price of a Soul." According to The Star's Washington dispatches, Senator Aldrich about the same time was looking after the price of soleleather.

A near poet writing about his sweetheart sings that "She Walks in Beauty." Sure, Mike. They all do that, but after marriage, if the poet happens to get her, he'll find out that she'll want to walk in the best shoes she can find in the city.

Mr. E. H. Harriman expresses the opinion that it would be disastrous to have too much idle money in this country. The money of the consumers don't have much chance to keep idle while the increased cost of living keeps all of it in circulation.

"Women should be careful how they select a husband," remarks a woman's magazine. They certainly should if the woman is one of those who will insist that she can't dress decently on $40,000 a year.

Ex-President Roosevelt will pause in the African jungles long enough to take notice that the United States Congress is taking care of the Trusts that he entertained a thought he busted.

The doctors now tell us that "emetine" will make a man quit drinking whiskey. In a great many instances we've known an empty pocket to do the same thing.

A Chicago woman offers $200 for a husband. Is she any ways particular whose husband it is?

CURRENT COMMENT.

—It would perhaps be easier for the Democrats to straighten out their platform than to read their representatives out of the party—Durham Herald.

—Greensboro and Charlotte should let us know whether they are willing to leave it to the government census takers before the thing is allowed to go further.—Durham Herald.

—Who shall say the world is not growing better? A Philadelphia heiress spells her name Daisy, and declines positively to consider Daysie and Daysye.—Philadelphia Evening Times.

—The Cheraw correspondent of The Charleston News and Courier sends that paper a bit of railroad information that is intensely interesting. It is said to come from an official source and is to the effect that the Atlantic Coast Line has entered into a contract with the Norfolk and Western road to connect with the latter at Roanoke, Va., and thereby establish a short route from Cincinnati, Chicago and the West to Charleston. It is understood that the contract has been signed by both roads, and that the Coast Line will soon award contracts for the construction of the necessary road links. At present the Coast Line owns and operates a branch road from Wadesboro to Charleston, running through Conway. It is said that this road as far as Florence will be straightened out, the grades reduced and 90-pound rails will be put down. A line from Wadesboro to Winston-Salem, eighty miles in length, will be constructed. At Winston-Salem the road will connect with the Norfolk & Southern, now controlled by the Norfolk & Western, to Roanoke, Va., and at Roanoke this connection will be made with the Norfolk and Western This sounds like business and there is every reason to believe that it is founded on fact. It would be a great thing for Charlotte if we could get the Norfolk and Western to tap this town. It would solve the freight discrimination problem in short order and we have an idea that the Norfolk and Western has been watching its chance to get into Charlotte.—Charlotte Chronicle.

International Tailoring Company Accepts Offer of I. Shrier For 1,475 Additional Suits—Samples Expressed for Selections.

Elsewhere in today's paper, Mr. I. Shrier, the well known clothier at northeast corner of Front and Princess streets, reproduces a telegram received yesterday afternoon from President J. L. Reiss, of the International Tailoring Co., of New York, accepting his offer for 1,475 additional suits to be made up in its merchant tailoring department at a figure so low that Mr. Shrier feels justified in announcing that he will be enabled to continue his great $12.50 and $19 sale a while longer.

A magnificent line of woolens in splendid patterns, both domestic and imported, have been sent by express to Mr. Shrier and these will be on display tomorrow. Patrons should call early to get best selections. On account of the very small margin of profit, the terms for this sale are strictly cash.

HAPPENINGS AND DOINGS

IN SOCIETY

By M. H.

Ode to the Heroes Who Sleep!

Once more in song and story,
We meet with gallant braves;
To speak of comrades sleeping
In Hero graves.
Campfires of love still burning
Above each sacred mound;
While mem'ries garlands verdant
Twine hearts around.

Furled is the gory banner,
Its beauty gone and worn;
Yet ones who died to save it,
In love we mourn:
Unfurl! and proudly hail it,
As those who long ago,
Hailed and bled and bore it,
And loved it so.

Past is the din of battle,
And thro' the hill and plain;
Where fell in countless numbers
Hosts of the slain,
There rings the swelling echo,
Resounding from above;
Past foes and friends united,
In Peace and Love.

Life's swelling tide rolls onward,
Mem'ries leaves turn with age;
But hearts long since united,
Warm each dead page,
And keeps with sacred passion,
Love's most holy fire,
A holy inspiration,
To son and sire.

The above poem which was written by Mrs. H. Dudley Burkheimer, of Charlotte ,a daughter of Dr. G. D. Bernheim, a former resident of Wilmington, will be read with interest, particularly when it is known that Mrs. Burkheimer has already sold quite a number of the copies at the Veterans' Reunion, at Memphis, at which time the trip was given to her and all expenses paid by the Mecklenburg Veterans, in appreciation of the beautiful poem. Mrs. Burkheimer intends to give the proceeds from the sale of this poem to the veterans for the Arlington Monument Fund, and doubtless her donation will be large, as she expects to have many copies of this poem published in attractive pamphlet form, on the back of which is a picture of the Confederate flag, and the dedication to the United Confederate Veterans.

AMERICAS' GRAND OLD MAN

Eulogy on the Liife of the Late Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

Editor of Star: In the issue of the Morning Star for June 11th, there appeared a telegraphic news item announcing the death of the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., chaplain of the United States Senate, at his home in Boston, Mass. On Sunday last, with the very simplest form of service, the mortal remains of that eminent man were laid to rest in the presence of thousands of Bostonians and others from various parts of the United States.

In the passing of Dr. Hale, whose name had long been a household word wherever the English language is spoken and even many alien races and people of uncouth language, there was reached the last of a long line of great men, great in literature, art, science, philanthropy, theology, and patriotism. He had lived to a ripe old age, his 87th birthday having been celebrated on April 3rd last. During that long, active and useful life he had won the reverence and affection of all sorts and conditions of men, by his facile pen, for he was the author of well nigh 100 books, and a popular contributor of newspaper and magazine articles to the very last. Probably, however, his greatest strength and usefulness met the outcome of his big tender heart, his pure and catholic spirit of charity, for it would be difficult to find another man, during the past half or three quarters of a century, in any country in the world, who had done nearly so much to ameliorate the conditions of large masses of the people—the submerged truth as General Booth has well named the lowest stratum of society—as has Dr. Hale through the medium of various philanthropic movements on societies he has either founded or actively supported. His capacity for work was phenomenal; and the wonderful magnetism of the man compelled others to identify themselves with him and his work so unselfish it was and always so appealing to the better side of human nature.

Time and space prevents the possibility of a simple enumeration of the many movements and unedrtakings with which he was identified, not in the too common prefunctory way, but with his whole heart, soul and life.

One of the most cherished organizations, comparatively little known to the outside world, because of the quiet unobtrusive methods insisted upon for carrying out Dr. Hale's plans of usefulness and helpfulness, is known as the "Lend a Hand Society," having its chief offices in Boston, while its representatives are at work in every part of the known world.

Of his voluminous writings, the story entitled: "The Man Without a Country," has always and will doubtless long remain his great and most popular work. It was first published during the struggle between the North and the South and had an immense influence in keep ing up the enthusiasm of the men in the field. It has since been translated into many foreign languages and enjoys today a very large sale still.

Having myself been intimately associated with Dr. Hale as his assistant for now well nigh 20 years, the present writer can bear testimony to the unabated interest, "the chief," as he was invariably called by his associates and familiars, always felt in every movement looking to the continual upbuilding of the Nation, in whose early history he was probably more profoundly read than any contemporary and about the growth of which he had written so much and so interestingly. Particularly was this the case with the history of the State of North Carolina. As far back as in the year 1845. Dr. Hale prepared and read a series of papers on the Colonial history of the Old North State before the Historical and Archeological Society of Worcester, Mass. And those valuable papers are still preserved in the archives of that Society.

May the present writer be further permitted to state that for over four years he has been privileged to reside in and ramble about the eastern section of North Carolina doing what he could to "lend a hand" in the work of education, religion and a better social service, through the powerful influence of the Rev. E. E. Hale. What I have been able to do in the way of help among the communities, which were practically ruined by the storms and floods of last Summer, has been done as his representative and the valuable consignment of useful seeds sent me for free distribution some months ago by the Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, and which have been so warmly appreciated, was secured for my struggling friends and neighbors throughout the devastated sections was sent either at the personal solicitation of my Chief, to whose memory I offer this brief though worthy tribute, in order that your readers may learn incidentally, how that in the peaceful passing of this "Grand Old Man," North Carolina has lost a friend who, amid the pressure of manifold duties, was ever ready to "lend a hand," if by so doing he could help others and thereby advance the Kingdom of righteousness, peace and love on earth.

LIBERTY POINT RESOLVES

Capt. S. A. Ashe Doubts Originality of Rowan Document and Relates Interesting Colonial History of Cape Fear Section.

Editor Star:—It is highly commendable that patriotism should be fostered in every community by public demonstrations commemorating the noble deeds of the men of that particular locality. But it often happens that by unduly magnifying some occurrence, we fall into error. We find Edenton enlarging on the importance of her local "Declaration of Independence," being the formal signing on June 19th, 1776, by the vestry at Edenton of "the test" which had been taken by the Provincial Congress in September, 1775, and at that time prescribed by law to be taken by all vestries and persons holding any position of honor or trust; and, later, by all the inhabitants of the province generally.

As the same document had been signed from six to nine months earlier by thousands of others in the Province, it gives a wrong impression of the general progress of events to attach undue importance to its being signed, under the requirement of the laws of the land, by the vestry at Edenton in June 1776. Still it is so disagreeable to throw a wet blanket on local ebullitions of commendable patriotism, that naturally one shinks from doing so.

Many years ago there was discovered a document in the handwriting of Mr. Rowan and signed by thirty-nine residents of Campbellton—dated June 20th, 1775, that was so highly patriotic as to be a source of pride to the people of Fayetteville. When in 1830 the Legislature appointed a committee to examine into the 20th of May Declaration, attention was called to this "Liberty Point' document. With the evidence then produced both documents were accepted as being what they purported to be. But as in the case of the one, so in the case of the other—new evidence puts them both in a different light.

By reference to Colonel Saunders' Colonial Records, Vol. X, page 25, it will be seen that on June 19th, 1775, the inhabitants of New Hanover county adopted an association paper; that the next day the committees of all the six Cape Fear counties met at Wilmington, and they adopted this same Association paper, which they directed to be printed with a recommendation that it be signed by the inhabitants of the entire district as soon as possible. Adopted by the District Committee on June 20th, it bore that date. Mr. Rowan apparently copied it, verbatim et literatim, including the date and carried it home with him; and obtained the signatures of 39 persons to it. While other copies have not been preserved, doubtless more than a thousand people, all through the Cape Fear counties, signed the same document, about the same time, in conformity with the recommendation of the District Committee.

It does not detract from the patriotic ardor of Mr. Rowan and his friends for the facts to be stated. But it would conflict somewhat with a proper understanding of the current course of events for the Liberty Point proceeding to be regarded as a step in advance of what was taking place all throughout the other counties. That very document was adopted by the inhabitants of New Hanover on June 19th; adopted by the committees of the six counties on the 20th, and probably the copy made by Mr. Rowan and carried home with him, later in the week, was not signed until on some subsequent day.

It is so disagreeable to run counter to local sentiment, that Chief Justice Clark, who like all others at all familiar with the history of those times probably knew the above facts, did not refer to them at all in his elaborate address at Fayetteville. But isn't it better for the truth to be taught? Is one justified in perpetuating error—knowingly? I had that question to consider when on an examination of the 20th of May matter, I found that the testimony of the very witnesses whose statements in 1820 and 1830 were supposed to sustain the authenticity of the 20th of May resolves, were talking about the resolves of May 31st, of which there was then no copy known to exist. As disagreeable as it was to tell the truth about that, yet I had either to refrain from publishing the book or to state the facts. So likewise about this Liberty Point affair. I correctly mentioned it. The inhabitants of Wilmington and New Hanover have so many glorious memories of their own, that they can enthusiastically sympathize with every other community of the State in their local demonstrations; and certainly no Wilmingtonian would ever seek to dim the glory of any patriotic action that illustrated the spirit of other communities. But ought we to refrain from putting all events in their proper light, and in their true and just relation to other contemporaneous events, because it is disagreeable to do so?

S. A. ASHE.

REV. FOMBY EXONERATED.

The Star is requested to publish the following:

"A new light on the affair that happened at Clinton recently. On May the 19th a strange woman entered Clinton, N. C., and told a touching story. Said that she was the mother of two children, a boy seven years old and a girl seven months old. She stated that her first husband had deserted her, and that she had moved to Perry, Fla., where she was running a boarding house, and doing sewing to support herself and children. She also stated that Rev. G. M. Fomby went to the town of Perry and took her children from her and had carried them away, and that she could not learn anything of their whereabouts; that he had taken them in an unlawful manner. She engaged Lawyer Graham to assist her in regaining her children and appeal was made to the sympathy of the people on the ground of a mother's love for her child. Such appeal excited the people an a mob was formed, which began to meet the train, expecting the arrival of Rev. Fomby and wife with the children. On the 1:00 o'clock train on the 22nd, they came in, but had left the children in an orphan home in Georgia. The woman demanded of him the whereabouts of her children. Mr. Fomby asked her if she had papers from the courts commanding him to tell the whereabouts of the children. She answered "No." He therefore refused to tell her. Then the mob seized him and proceeded to knock, choke and kick him, with threats of killing unless he told the whereabouts of the children. He refused to tell them also and asked them to show their papers commanding him to tell where the children were. Someone told him that his fist was authority enough to make Mr. Fomby tell it. Upon that he was told he would have it to use. They began to knock and choke the second time. Mrs. Fomby, for fear that the mob were going to kill her husband told where the children were. Still the chastisement continued. At the beginning and at different times they were told that Mr. Fomby had a paper from the courts of Florida, showing his authority for his custody of the children. They refused to see them. When the assault started, the town policeman fled from the scene to parts up town. Township constable, Shipp, who was also night policeman, learned of the disturbance and hurried to the depot. He took Rev. Fomby and wife in charge for protection and escorted them to the Mayor's office, where the papers were produced and examined, which showed that the courts of Florida took the children and gave them to Rev. Fomby. The woman, it is alleged, was a lewd character and the mistress of a house of ill fame, located in the negro settlement of the town of Perry. The people of Florida did not think her a proper custodian for the children. She being defeated in the courts and ordered to leave Perry, never to return, came to Clinton, determined to defeat law and justice. A warrant was sworn out against Rev. Fomby and wife for kidnapping. They gave bond and the case was called for a hearing on June 1st. The prosecutors failed to appear. Abundant evidence from Perry, Fla., was produced, declaring the innocency of Rev. and Mrs. Fomby. On motion by Hon. F. R. Cooper the case was dismissed.

"The New Life Rescue Home, Clinton, N. C., of which Rev. G. M. Fomby is president, and Mrs. G. M. Fomby is matron, is operated in the interest of fallen girls to rescue them from shame, and place them in good homes and get for them honorable positions, where they can build themselves up and regain the confidence of the people. It is a work that appeals to Christianity and philanthropic people everywhere. The heart that moves with sympathy for the fallen and unfortunate is thus like the great loving heart of our Master. This institution wants your sympathy, prayers and support. It is strictly a charitable institution and offers assistance to poor unfortunate girls and children, to rescue them from disreputable places."

PLAY BALL.

(Jerome Fleishman in Business Philosopher.)

Don't fret when the world isn't smiling,
But roll up your sleeves and say:
"I don't give a rap what Fate has on tap;
Things have just got to come my way."

And you'll find, when you enter the battle,
Folks always salaam to the strong
It's the fellow who slugs as he sails into things
That the world always helps along.

So brace up and face the music;
Get harmony out of the din—
You can if you will, but not standing still;
Get busy, and go in to win!

HAPPENINGS AND DOINGS IN SOCIETY

By M. H.

Ode to the Heroes Who Sleep!

Once more in song and story,
We meet with gallant braves;
To speak of comrades sleeping
In Hero graves.
Campfires of love still burning
While mem'ries garlands verdant
Twine hearts around.

Furled is the gory banner,
Its beauty gone and worn;
Yet ones who died to save it,
In love we mourn:
Unfurl! and proudly hail it,
As those who long ago,
Hailed and bled and bore it,
And loved it so.

Past is the din of battle,
And thro' the hill and plain;
Where fell in countless numbers
Hosts of the slain,
There rings the swelling echo,
Resounding from above;
Past foes and friends united,
In Peace and Love.

Life's swelling tide rolls onward,
Mem'ries leaves turn with age;
But hearts long since united,
Warm each dead page,
And keeps with sacred passion,
Love's most holy fire,
A holy inspiration,
To son and sire.

The above poem which was written by Mrs. H. Dudley Burkheimer, of Charlotte ,a daughter of Dr. G. D. Bernheim, a former resident of Wilmington, will be read with interest, particularly when it is known that Mrs. Burkheimer has already sold quite a number of the copies at the Veterans' Reunion, at Memphis, at which time the trip was given to her and all expenses paid by the Mecklenburg Veterans, in appreciation of the beautiful poem. Mrs. Burkheimer intends to give the proceeds from the sale of this poem to the veterans for the Arlington Monument Fund, and doubtless her donation will be large, as she expects to have many copies of this poem published in attractive pamphlet form, on the back of which is a picture of the Confederate flag, and the dedication to the United Confederate Veterans.

Eulogy on the Life of the Late Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

Editor of Star: In the issue of the Morning Star for June 11th, there appeared a telegraphic news item announcing the death of the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., chaplain of the United States Senate, at his home in Boston, Mass. On Sunday last, with the very simplest form of service, the mortal remains of that eminent man were laid to rest in the presence of thousands of Bostonians and others from various parts of the United States.

In the passing of Dr. Hale, whose name had long been a household word wherever the English language is spoken and even many alien races and people of uncouth language, there was reached the last of a long line of great men, great in literature, art, science, philanthropy, theology, and patriotism. He had lived to a ripe old age, his 87th birthday having been celebrated on April 3rd last. During that long, active and useful life he had won the reverence and affection of all sorts and conditions of men, by his facile pen, for he was the author of well nigh 100 books, and a popular contributor of newspaper and magazine articles to the very last. Probably, however, his greatest strength and usefulness met the outcome of his big tender heart, his pure and catholic spirit of charity, for it would be difficult to find another man, during the past half or three quarters of a century, in any country in the world, who had done nearly so much to ameliorate the conditions of large masses of the people—the submerged truth as General Booth has well named the lowest stratum of society—as has Dr. Hale through the medium of various philanthropic movements on societies he has either founded or actively supported. His capacity for work was phenomenal; and the wonderful magnetism of the man compelled others to identify themselves with him and his work so unselfish it was and always so appealing to the better side of human nature.

Time and space prevents the possibility of a simple enumeration of the many movements and unedrtakings with which he was identified, not in the too common prefunctory way, but with his whole heart, soul and life.

One of the most cherished organizations, comparatively little known to the outside world, because of the quiet unobtrusive methods insisted upon for carrying out Dr. Hale's plans of usefulness and helpfulness, is known as the "Lend a Hand Society," having its chief offices in Boston, while its representatives are at work in every part of the known world.

Of his voluminous writings, the story entitled: "The Man Without a Country," has always and will doubtless long remain his great and most popular work. It was first published during the struggle between the North and the South and had an immense influence in keep ing up the enthusiasm of the men in the field. It has since been translated into many foreign languages and enjoys today a very large sale still.

Having myself been intimately associated with Dr. Hale as his assistant for now well nigh 20 years, the present writer can bear testimony to the unabated interest, "the chief," as he was invariably called by his associates and familiars, always felt in every movement looking to the continual upbuilding of the Nation, in whose early history he was probably more profoundly read than any contemporary and about the growth of which he had written so much and so interestingly. Particularly was this the case with the history of the State of North Carolina. As far back as in the year 1845. Dr. Hale prepared and read a series of papers on the Colonial history of the Old North State before the Historical and Archeological Society of Worcester, Mass. And those valuable papers are still preserved in the archives of that Society.

May the present writer be further permitted to state that for over four years he has been privileged to reside in and ramble about the eastern section of North Carolina doing what he could to "lend a hand" in the work of education, religion and a better social service, through the powerful influence of the Rev. E. E. Hale. What I have been able to do in the way of help among the communities, which were practically ruined by the storms and floods of last Summer, has been done as his representative and the valuable consignment of useful seeds sent me for free distribution some months ago by the Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, and which have been so warmly appreciated, was secured for my struggling friends and neighbors throughout the devastated sections was sent either at the personal solicitation of my Chief, to whose memory I offer this brief though worthy tribute, in order that your readers may learn incidentally, how that in the peaceful passing of this "Grand Old Man," North Carolina has lost a friend who, amid the pressure of manifold duties, was ever ready to "lend a hand," if by so doing he could help others and thereby advance the Kingdom of righteousness, peace and love on earth.

LIBERTY POINT RESOLVES

Capt. S. A. Ashe Doubts Originality of Rowan Document and Relates Interesting Colonial History of Cape Fear Section.

Editor Star:—It is highly commendable that patriotism should be fostered in every community by public demonstrations commemorating the noble deeds of the men of that particular locality. But it often happens that by unduly magnifying some occurrence, we fall into error. We find Edenton enlarging on the importance of her local "Declaration of Independence," being the formal signing on June 19th, 1776, by the vestry at Edenton of "the test" which had been taken by the Provincial Congress in September, 1775, and at that time prescribed by law to be taken by all vestries and persons holding any position of honor or trust; and, later, by all the inhabitants of the province generally.

As the same document had been signed from six to nine months earlier by thousands of others in the Province, it gives a wrong impression of the general progress of events to attach undue importance to its being signed, under the requirement of the laws of the land, by the vestry at Edenton in June 1776. Still it is so disagreeable to throw a wet blanket on local ebullitions of commendable patriotism, that naturally one shinks from doing so.

Many years ago there was discovered a document in the handwriting of Mr. Rowan and signed by thirty-nine residents of Campbellton—dated June 20th, 1775, that was so highly patriotic as to be a source of pride to the people of Fayetteville. When in 1830 the Legislature appointed a committee to examine into the 20th of May Declaration, attention was called to this "Liberty Point' document. With the evidence then produced both documents were accepted as being what they purported to be. But as in the case of the one, so in the case of the other—new evidence puts them both in a different light.

By reference to Colonel Saunders' Colonial Records, Vol. X, page 25, it will be seen that on June 19th, 1775, the inhabitants of New Hanover county adopted an association paper; that the next day the committees of all the six Cape Fear counties met at Wilmington, and they adopted this same Association paper, which they directed to be printed with a recommendation that it be signed by the inhabitants of the entire district as soon as possible. Adopted by the District Committee on June 20th, it bore that date. Mr. Rowan apparently copied it, verbatim et literatim, including the date and carried it home with him; and obtained the signatures of 39 persons to it. While other copies have not been preserved, doubtless more than a thousand people, all through the Cape Fear counties, signed the same document, about the same time, in conformity with the recommendation of the District Committee.

It does not detract from the patriotic ardor of Mr. Rowan and his friends for the facts to be stated. But it would conflict somewhat with a proper understanding of the current course of events for the Liberty Point proceeding to be regarded as a step in advance of what was taking place all throughout the other counties. That very document was adopted by the inhabitants of New Hanover on June 19th; adopted by the committees of the six counties on the 20th, and probably the copy made by Mr. Rowan and carried home with him, later in the week, was not signed until on some subsequent day.

It is so disagreeable to run counter to local sentiment, that Chief Justice Clark, who like all others at all familiar with the history of those times probably knew the above facts, did not refer to them at all in his elaborate address at Fayetteville. But isn't it better for the truth to be taught? Is one justified in perpetuating error—knowingly? I had that question to consider when on an examination of the 20th of May matter, I found that the testimony of the very witnesses whose statements in 1820 and 1830 were supposed to sustain the authenticity of the 20th of May resolves, were talking about the resolves of May 31st, of which there was then no copy known to exist. As disagreeable as it was to tell the truth about that, yet I had either to refrain from publishing the book or to state the facts. So likewise about this Liberty Point affair. I correctly mentioned it. The inhabitants of Wilmington and New Hanover have so many glorious memories of their own, that they can enthusiastically sympathize with every other community of the State in their local demonstrations; and certainly no Wilmingtonian would ever seek to dim the glory of any patriotic action that illustrated the spirit of other communities. But ought we to refrain from putting all events in their proper light, and in their true and just relation to other contemporaneous events, because it is disagreeable to do so?

S. A. ASHE.

REV. FOMBY EXONERATED.

The Star is requested to publish the following:

"A new light on the affair that happened at Clinton recently. On May the 19th a strange woman entered Clinton, N. C., and told a touching story. Said that she was the mother of two children, a boy seven years old and a girl seven months old. She stated that her first husband had deserted her, and that she had moved to Perry, Fla., where she was running a boarding house, and doing sewing to support herself and children. She also stated that Rev. G. M. Fomby went to the town of Perry and took her children from her and had carried them away, and that she could not learn anything of their whereabouts; that he had taken them in an unlawful manner. She engaged Lawyer Graham to assist her in regaining her children and appeal was made to the sympathy of the people on the ground of a mother's love for her child. Such appeal excited the people an a mob was formed, which began to meet the train, expecting the arrival of Rev. Fomby and wife with the children. On the 1:00 o'clock train on the 22nd, they came in, but had left the children in an orphan home in Georgia. The woman demanded of him the whereabouts of her children. Mr. Fomby asked her if she had papers from the courts commanding him to tell the whereabouts of the children. She answered "No." He therefore refused to tell her. Then the mob seized him and proceeded to knock, choke and kick him, with threats of killing unless he told the whereabouts of the children. He refused to tell them also and asked them to show their papers commanding him to tell where the children were. Someone told him that his fist was authority enough to make Mr. Fomby tell it. Upon that he was told he would have it to use. They began to knock and choke the second time. Mrs. Fomby, for fear that the mob were going to kill her husband told where the children were. Still the chastisement continued. At the beginning and at different times they were told that Mr. Fomby had a paper from the courts of Florida, showing his authority for his custody of the children. They refused to see them. When the assault started, the town policeman fled from the scene to parts up town. Township constable, Shipp, who was also night policeman, learned of the disturbance and hurried to the depot. He took Rev. Fomby and wife in charge for protection and escorted them to the Mayor's office, where the papers were produced and examined, which showed that the courts of Florida took the children and gave them to Rev. Fomby. The woman, it is alleged, was a lewd character and the mistress of a house of ill fame, located in the negro settlement of the town of Perry. The people of Florida did not think her a proper custodian for the children. She being defeated in the courts and ordered to leave Perry, never to return, came to Clinton, determined to defeat law and justice. A warrant was sworn out against Rev. Fomby and wife for kidnapping. They gave bond and the case was called for a hearing on June 1st. The prosecutors failed to appear. Abundant evidence from Perry, Fla., was produced, declaring the innocency of Rev. and Mrs. Fomby. On motion by Hon. F. R. Cooper the case was dismissed.

"The New Life Rescue Home, Clinton, N. C., of which Rev. G. M. Fomby is president, and Mrs. G. M. Fomby is matron, is operated in the interest of fallen girls to rescue them from shame, and place them in good homes and get for them honorable positions, where they can build themselves up and regain the confidence of the people. It is a work that appeals to Christianity and philanthropic people everywhere. The heart that moves with sympathy for the fallen and unfortunate is thus like the great loving heart of our Master. This institution wants your sympathy, prayers and support. It is strictly a charitable institution and offers assistance to poor unfortunate girls and children, to rescue them from disreputable places."

PLAY BALL.

(Jerome Fleishman in Business Philosopher.)

Don't fret when the world isn't smiling,
But roll up your sleeves and say:
"I don't give a rap what Fate has on tap;
Things have just got to come my way."

And you'll find, when you enter the battle,
Folks always salaam to the strong
It's the fellow who sings as he sails into things
That the world always helps along.

So brace up and face the music;
Get harmony out of the din—
You can if you will, but not standing still;
Get busy, and go in to win!

Elizabethtown, N. C., June 25.—There occurred yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. F. C. McLeod, one of the most beautiful home weddings seen in this historic section for many years, the groom being Mr. William Duncan McCallum, of Rowland, and the bride, Miss Annie Belle McLeod. The ceremony took place in the east parlor which was artistically decorated with Southern smilax and pine needle fringe. The ushers, Col. T. A. Lyon, of this place, and L. Alexander Smith, Esq., of Clarkton, preceded to the parlor the bridesmaid, Miss Lena Hall, and maid of honor, Miss Katie McLeod, sister of the bride. Next came the groom with his brother and best man, Mr. Brown McCallum, who stood immediately in front of the improvised altar. With Whittier's words, "It Might Have Been" pulsing through their hardened old hearts each gay young wooer watched with bated breath the beautiful young bride as she came in leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. A. S. McEwen, of Abbottsburg, who gave her away. Rev. Wm. R. Shaw, of Rosindale, performed the ceremony. The wedding marches were played by Miss Lou Register. The bridesmaids wore Princess gowns of white organdie with pink sashes, and carried shower bouquets of pink roses and ferns. The bride carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and ferns and was gowned in a beautiful Princess of white silk messaline. The color scheme was white and pink. The presents were many and valuable. After the ceremony and brief reception the young couple drove to Clarkton whence they left on the Seaboard train for their future home in Robeson.

Marion, S. C., June 26.—The Presbyterian church presented a beautiful scene Wednesday evening when the wedding of Miss Jennie Eva Crane and Mr. Norwood Orrell, of Wilmington, N. C., took place ,the impressive ceremony performed by Rev. Mr. Kilgo being witnessed by an assemblage of relatives and friends of the young people. The church was beautiful in its simple decorations of palms and ferns. While the friends were assembling Miss White, of Wilmington, charmed her hearers with several beautiful solos, "O, Promise Me" being rendered just before the bridal party entered the church. Mrs. J. N. Tenhet, who accompanied Miss White, also played the wedding marches. To the strains of Lohengrin at 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the church. First came the bridesmaids, Miss Annie Stackhouse and Miss Elizabeth Woodward, of Wilmington, and two of the groomsmen, Mr. W. F. Miles and Mr. David Bartlett, of Philadelphia, bearing pink and white ribbons, which formed an aisle for the rest of the bridal party. The ushers, Mr. E. McClenny and Mr. J. H. Allensworth, of Atlanta, came next, followed by the bridesmaids and groomsmen. These were Misses Minnie Hewett, Cora Lee Allensworth, of Atlanta, Edna Carmichael and Henrietta Dull, of Atlanta. Messrs. Rufus Knott, Daniel Carmichael, Clinton Smith, of Rocky Mount, and Dr. T. W. Hamilton. The maid of honor, Miss Thurber Gore, of Wilmington, was lovely in a gown of pink messaline and shower bouquet of ferns, preceding the bride who entered with her father. Her girlish beauty was accentuated by her bridal gown of white callot satin with corsage with bride's roses and her bouquet was a great shower of bride's roses and valley lilies. The bridesmaids wore gowns of white lingerie made Princess with pink sashes. In their hair were wreaths of pink roses and the bouquets were of roses and ferns with streamers of pink tulle. The wedding of Miss Crane and Mr. Orrell unites two young people who are very popular in Marion and Wilmington. The bride aside from her personal beauty is a very attractive and talented young woman. Mr. Orrell is one of Wilmington's successful young business men and his friends are legion.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at R. R. Bellamy's.

NEXT MEETING AT THE BEACH.

State Dentists Come to Wrightsville in 1910.—New Officers.

Another convention is scheduled for Wrightsville Beach next year. The North Carolina Dental Society, in session in Asheville, late Friday night, just before adjournment, accepted the invitation to hold the next annual meeting at the beach. Two Wilmington dentists were elected officers of the association, Dr. W. T. Smith, first vice president, and Dr. J. W. Stanley, supervisor of clinics. Dr. J. C. Watkins, Winston-Salem, was elected president; Dr. L. L. Dameron, Newbern, second vice president; Dr. Arthur Fleming, Louisburg, secretary; Dr. R. N. Morrow, Burlington, treasurer; Dr. J. A. Sinclair, Asheville, essayist.

The following were named as the executive committee: Dr. D. L. James, Greenville; Dr. C. F. Smith, Louisburg; Dr. W. C. Regan, Laurinburg. Ethics committee: Dr. J. S. Spurgeon, Hillsboro; Dr. R. E. Ware, Shelby; Dr. R. N. Squires, Wake Forest. Dr. J. Martin Fleming, of Raleigh, was elected chairman of the prosecuting committee, and Dr. P. E. Horton, of Winston-Salem, chairman of publishing committee. Dr. V. E. Turner, of Raleigh, was re-elected a member of the State Board of Examiners, and Dr. F. L. Hunt, of Asheville, was elected to succeed Dr. R. H. Jones, of Winston-Salem. The Board organized by electing Dr. Turner president and Dr. Hunt secretary.

The committee took unfavorable action on the recommendation that the special license tax imposed by the State upon the practice of medicine and other professions be repealed, on the ground that it would be possible for the cities and towns to impose a special tax which might be more harmful. The appointment of a legislative committee was deferred until next year. The society decided to admit to membership all ethical dentists.

Committee for Police Outing.

The committee for the annual police excursion to Carolina Beach, has been chosen as follows: E. J. Grimsley, C. E. Wood, W. R. Applebury, H. W. Howell, D. W. Coleman and W. G. Brinkley. The excursion bids fair to be pleasant and well attended and any and all donations from the merchants will be greatly appreciated. The police will come for them by 'phoning the City Hall.

Quietus on Wilson.

Fayetteville, N. C., June 26.—Fayetteville stopped Wilson's winning streak today by taking the last game of the series 10 to 1. The features were Clemens' home run and Streaser's steal home for the locals. The home team played an errorless game. Score:

Rained Out at Rocky Mount.

Rocky Mount, N. C., June 26—There was no game in this city today between Raleigh and the local team though rain checks were the order of the day to the fair-sized crowd which turned out, despite the threatening weather. The game was called at the beginning of the second with one man out and nobody on bases for Raleigh while a base on balls and a two-base hit by Lambert for the crew had netted the locals one run. There had been one hit made by each team and perfect fielding. O'Gara did the flinging for the Railroaders while Pope his opposing slab artist.

"Dutch" Tracy, a local young ball player of note who helped quite a little in the enviable record of St. Josephs College, of Baltimore, this year and who led the batting at that institution donned a Rocky Mount uniform and was in the day's game and has affixed his signature to a local contract.

SQUEAKS.

Jonahed!

Wasn't it hair-raising?

Levy's hoo-doo is beginning to visit regularly on Saturdays.

We're weak at short-field; and there's no rubbing that out.

Stoehr sent one along the initial path gratis, to Levy's four.

The Sailors went after that Stoehr's wares like it was known what was offering.

Those snappy double-plays every little while bordered dangerously on major ball.

Harry's quick eye caught Giant Smith wandering off second in the 5th and napped him at the bag.

It was what the veteran dope daubers would call a now-and-then game; with work of a classic nature at some stages, and amber-hued performing at others.

There was a slip-up made in calling for Nichols to throw to second in the 11th, and church was out the next minute when that ground speeder got through first.

Jayes carpet-bagging the entire circuit for a tally on his single, in which he was aided and abetted by the Giants' tendency to fondle the ball, was a remarkable piece of work.

The blue ribbon for the day goes to Jayes who busied himself muchly in the outskirts yanking down all sorts and conditions of flies; and for his timber work. That aerial catch of a long sky-pruiser away off his beat in the ninth was of the kind you don't often read about.

Sharp played a cracking game, accepting many long chances and getting out with only one (excusable) error charged against him. And Capt. Dick made an all-right leaping spear of Stubbe's whack. In fact all of the locals performed in a very satisfactory manner.

It has not been a great while, if our memory's still on the job, since Mr. Argus Robinson pulled off an awful threat in the public prints about having the Giants visit Wilmington and lug off a trey of games from the locals and further said he'd have 'em do it, too. But we'll forgive him this time if he promises not to prophesy again, and moseys back to the organ loft with the rest of the pipes when he does another Endymion stunt. And to show our heart's in the right place—and taking chances on being dubbed mercenary—we sincerely hope Goldsboro grabs all three games from Wilson this week.

mington next Wednesday will be well patronized. A special train will be run from St. Paul's over the V. & C. S., to connect with the excursion train which leaves here at 7:30 o'clock——Mr. A. T. Parmele and family have removed to their elegant new home on North Main street, and we understand the residence vacated by them will be occupied by the family of Mr. A. W. Peace, cashier of the Bank of Lumberton——Mr. J. R. Inman, of Lyon, Ga., is visiting in this section. Mr. Inman was for several years a citizen of Lumberton, but moved with his family to Georgia over 20 years ago——One day this week Mr. J. R. Morris killed a water fowl or the loon species, which attracted much attention. The fowl has been seen on the river for some time, but several shots have failed to reach it. It was said to be an expert diver——Mrs. T. D. Kitchin, who has been visiting relatives at Scotland Neck for several days returned home this week——Mr. J. G. McCormick, of Wilmington, was a Lumberton visitor Thursday——Junius McKay, the negro who was to have been hanged here yesterday, but whose sentence was commuted to life imprisonment was carried to Raleigh Thursday morning by Sheriff McNeill, and delivered to the penitentiary authorities——A few days ago a lot 60x105 feet on Fourth, between Front and Water streets, was sold at public auction, bringing $2,605. The building on the lot is practically worthless, and the lot would be worth more without it. This will give some idea of the real estate situation in Lumberton——Buster Brown and his dog Tige, are advertised to appear at the Lumberton opera house, Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and everybody is invited to call and see them free of charge.——Messrs. D. P. Shaw and Thos. L. Johnson have formed a co-partnership under the firm name of Shaw & Johnson, for the practice of law, and will occupy rooms in the McLeod building.——The time for listing taxes will be out Wednesday evening, and Mr. G. T. Cox, list taker for Lumberton township, says there are a great many property owners, who do not seem to think that they are required to list their property. Better avoid the rush——Mrs. J. B. Doar and children arrived this week from Georgetown, S. C., and will spend the Summer in Lumberton Mr. Doar will be employed in the office of County Auditor Nash——The temperature crawled up to 95 yesterday, and while it had reached 96 a few days earlier, the heat yesterday was most intense.

The way the charitable people of Lumberton are being imposed upon by a crowd of beggars living a few miles out is a shame. The mother of four or five grown-up sons and daughters, well able to work for their living, comes to town, making a house to house canvass, and when she has all she can carry, goes to some point in town where some of the crowd is in waiting to receive the goods, and then she starts out again and repeats the trip until they are supplied for several days——Dr. W. A. McPhaul, who has been in the Fayetteville hospital for some time for typhoid fever is reported as improving and hopes soon to be able to return home. Mrs. McPhaul, who has been in Fayetteville since the doctor went to the hospital, returned home yesterday.

Empty Money Drawer Found.

The money drawer stolen from the store of Mr. Goldstein, at Burgaw, last Thursday night, was found yesterday afternoon on the outer edge of Burgaw under a bridge on the road leading toward Wilmington. There is still no clue to the identity of the robber or robbers. The thieves took $235 from the money drawer.

N. C. ARCHITECTS IN SESSION

Fourth Annual Convention Being Held at Wrightsville Beach—Yesterday's Session Given to Discussions—Social.

The fourth annual convention of the North Carolina Architectural Association convened at the Seashore Hotel, Wrightsville Beach, yesterday at noon with a good attendance of the members of the organization and several visitors.

The meeting was called to order by President Joseph F. Leitner, of this city, who welcomed the visitors to Wilmington and the beach in a brief address, delivered in his characteristically happy manner. The response was by Mr. Charles C. Hook, of Charlotte, who expressed the sentiments of the entire assemblage when he said that he was sure the visitors would have the time of their lives while guests of the local architects. A number of matters of interest to the members of the organization were brought up and discussed. The afternoon session was not held, some of the members desiring to attend the baseball game. Others remained at the beach and probably enjoyed themselves as well as if they had gone to witness the game.

There are a number of representatives of supply houses here and a movement is on foot to have a big exhibit at the next annual meeting. The mid-winter meeting of the organization will probably be held in Raleigh this year.

Last night the visitors had a royal good time at a smoker tendered them at The Seashore by the local members of the organization. Today they will take a trip to sea on Captain Wells' boat, leaving the beach at 10 o'clock. This is expected to prove one of the most enjoyable features of the gathering. A business session will be held Monday morning at which time the annual election of officers will occur. Monday night a smoker will be given in the Elks' club rooms in honor of the visitors.

At yesterday's meeting three applications for membership were received among them being Mr. J. T. Turner, of Wilmington, junior member of the firm of Leitner & Wilkins.

The members here for the meeting are: Franklin Gordon, secretary; Chas. C. Hook, W. G. Rogers and O. D. Wheeler, of Charlotte; Hill C. Linthicum, of Durham; Frank Thompson and C. W. Barrett, of Raleigh; Chas. Southerland and H. W. Simpson, of Newbern; L. A. H. Koeth and J. F. Leitner, of Wilmington. Among the representatives of the supply houses are: John A. RETRIBUTION MADE.

Harris' Brother Returned Amount Secured From Shelby Man.

Mr. Thos. B. Harris, of Lincolnton, brother of Fred Harris, arrested here a few days ago for fraud and forgery, arrived in the city early yesterday morning and made a satisfactory adjustment of the matter with Mr. R. L. Washburn, whose name the young man used in securing $75 by telegraph from Mr. Thos. B. Washburn, of Shelby.

Fred Harris is still at the James Walker Memorial Hospital and will not be able to leave that institution for a day or so yet. It is not known whether or not the case against him will be pushed in the courts, but it is thought by some of those who are familiar with the circumstances, which have been previously given in The Star, that the action will be dismissed and the defendant allowed to leave the city.

Mr. Harris stated to Chief of Police Williams that this is the first time that his brother was ever in any trouble of the kind and intimated that it was brought on by his wife leaving him some time ago. Fred Harris told several people that his wife was at Wrightsville Beach and that he was down here to see if he could get her to return with him. However, his story was given little credence on account of his intoxicated condition. It was learned yesterday that the story of the defendant regarding his wife was true and that she is employed at one of the hotels on the beach.

Normal Bible Institute.

Beginning tomorrow and continuing each evening during the week, a Normal Bible Institute will be conducted at the Central Baptist Church, colored, Seventh and Red Cross streets, by Rev. S. N. Vass, D. D., superintendent of colored work of the American Baptist Publication Society. Dr. Vass comes with an experience of 15 years in Bible work and the entire Bible will be studied during the week. Rev. Geo. W. Moore is pastor of Central Baptist Church and extends a cordial invitation to all to attend.

Free Trips to Wrightsville.

The Post, Rockingham's splendid new weekly newspaper, has started a subscription contest and the six successful lady contestants will be given a free trip to Wrightsville Beach, where they will be cared for at The Seashore Hotel for seven days at the expense of the paper. The contest ends the last week in July and the young ladies will come to the beach the first week in August. One will be sent from Hamlet, one from Rockingham, two from the mills and two from the county. It is expected that a large number will enter the contest, which will be spirited.

WILL CONSTRUCT SOUTHBOUND

Atlantic Coast Line and Norfolk & Western Will Furnish Funds for Building Road From Winston to Wadesboro.

President T. M. Emerson, of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, announced yesterday morning that the Norfolk & Western and the Atlantic Coast Line railroads, through the president and general counsel of each road, had completed final arrangements to furnish the necessary funds for the construction of the Winston-Salem Southbound Railway, from Winston-Salem to Wadesboro, a distance of 90 miles, work on which was begun some years ago but was suspended in 1907 following the radical action of the General Assembly of that year.

Bids for the construction of the road will be called for at once and work will be pushed to a rapid completion. It is hoped to have the road completed, equipped and in operation within 18 months or two years. This will give the Atlantic Coast Line a new short line connection with the Norfolk & Western and will be of great benefit to the people of Wilmington as well as to those living in the territory that will be traversed by the line. It is not known yet just where the road will cross the Southern Railway, but it is thought probable that it will go by Lexington.

The Winston-Salem Southbound was chartered and organized several years ago and included in the list of stockholders some of the most prominent men of Winston-Salem, Wadesboro and other points along the proposed route of the road. Mr. H. E. Fries, of Winston-Salem, has been president of the company for some time and he and his brother, Col. F. H. Fries, owned a large block of the stock. Bond elections were held in a large number of the townships through which the road was to run and in practically every case the bonds were voted by large majorities.

Practically all of the right-of-way for the road was secured some time ago, and numerous surveys have been made, the company maintaining an office with a large corps of engineers in Winston-Salem. At the annual meeting in 1907, shortly after work on the road was abandoned on account of the panicky times and radical legislation, a statement was given out to the effect that between $200,000 and $300,000 had been spent on the road.

The road will open up one of the best sections of North Carolina. The counties through which the road will run are somewhat hilly and there are several large rivers to be reckoned with, but it is stated that the line will be laid out as nearly straight as possible, and will be constructed to take care of a trunk line business.

At Winston-Salem the Southbound will connect with the main branch line of the Norfolk & Western, which penetrates the Pocahontas coal fields, and at Wadesboro with the Cheraw & Darlington branch of the Atlantic Coast Line, which joins the main line at Florence, S. C.

N. C. DRUGGISTS ADJOURN.

Mr. G. Y. Watson, of Southport, Elected President.

At the closing session of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, in Greensboro, Friday afternoon, Mr. G. Y. Watson, of Southport, was chosen president for the ensuing year and Charlotte was named as the next meeting place and the second Wednesday in June, 1910, as the time. Other officers were elected as follows: I. W. Rose, Rocky Mount, first vice president; Max T. Payne, Greensboro, second vice president; G. A. Matton, High Point, third vice president; P. W. Vaughn, Durham, secretary; G. K. Grantham, Kinston, treasurer. The executive committee is composed of J. P. Stowe, J. E. Hood, E. R. Thomas, Howard Gardner, P. W. Vaughn. J. P. Woodall was elected to fill the place of local secretary.

The meeting was the most successful and largely attended in the history of the association and a number of matters of importance to the druggists of the State were thoroughly discussed, and resolutions were passed strongly favoring a higher professional standard and recommending that in the near future licentiates who wish to be managers be required to be graduates of colleges of pharmacy, and assistants must have fair education. The address of Mr. Max T. Payne, a prominent young Greensboro druggist, on the value of advertising, was one of the most interesting features of the closing session. An excellent paper, prepared by Mr. William Neistlie, of Wilmington, was read by the secretary.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

State Organization of Anti-Tuberculosis League Among Negroes.

At a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of leading Afro-Americans of the city at St. Stephen's Church on Friday of the past week, a North Carolina branch of the Anti-Tuberculosis League under the auspices of the United States Marine and Public Health Service, a permanent organization was effected with the adoption of a constitution and by-laws and the election of officers as follows: President, Rev. W. A. Clark; vice president, Rev. J. A. Bonner; secretary, Rev. J. T. Willingham; treasurer, Rev. E. T. Bailey. Another meeting will be held at the First Baptist Church, colored, at which arrangements will be made for the formation of church leagues in all the colored congregations of the city. The work has splendid possibilities for much good among the colored people and it is hoped the interest will not be allowed to lag.

FIRST OF SERIES OF RACES

Sailed Over Carolina Yacht Club Course at Wrightsville Beach Yesterday Afternoon—Col. Metts, the Winner.

The first of a series of six or eight races between owners and captains of the fleet of new boats recently built in this city by an expert from Atlantic City, was sailed over the club course of the Carolina Yacht Club at Wrightsville Beach yesterday afternoon, Col. John VanB. Metts being the winner in No. 68, covering the course of eight miles in 1:36:20.

The race was very interesting and was watched with much interest by club members and their friends who gathered on the club pier. The boats were all given what is known as a flying start from a signal gun fired five minutes as a preparatory; two minutes as second signal and one minute for start. The judges were Messrs. T. E. Brown, H. J. MacMillan and J. S. Brown and all the entrants were of the Class A type, the record of the race being as follows:

No. 63, Capt. S. P. Cowan, start 3:00:52, finish 4:40:00, allowance at start 52 seconds.

No. 64, Capt. C. W. Worth, start 3:00:27, finish 4:48:20, allowance at start 27 seconds.

No. 65, Capt. Geo. Davis, start 3:00:15, finish 4:39:09, allowance at start 15 seconds.

No. 67, Capt. B. H. Bridgers, start 3:00:21, finish 4:43:25, allowance at start 21 seconds.

No. 68, Capt. J. VanB. Metts, finish 4:36:41, allowance at start, 21 seconds.

No. 69, Capt. Thos. P. Hammer, start 3:00:30, finish 4:46:42, allowance at start 30 seconds.

Another regatta will be sailed on the 4th of July and this event is being looked forward to with much interest. Copies of the by-laws and constitution as recently amended may be had by applying to the purser.

Given Hearing for Assault.

Before Justice Bornemann at 10 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Harry Otis, pitcher of the Goldsboro baseball team, and Mr. Hardy L. Fennell, of this city, were given a hearing on the charge of assault, the personal encounter having taken place at League Park Friday afternoon. The justice decided that Mr. Otis had been sufficiently punished and the case against him was dismissed. Mr. Fennell was found guilty and judgment was suspended upon payment of costs.

Ordination Service Today.

At the morning service at St. John's Episcopal church today Mr. N. C. Duncan will be ordained deacon by Rt. Rev. Robert Strange, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese. The ordination sermon will be preached by Rev. J. B. Gibble, of Windsor, and the ministers attending the Bishop's "Retreat" will come up from the beach and participate in the service. The rector of the parish extends a cordial invitation to all to attend this service.

myself. Edith tried to win one of the girl's fellows while lying on the bed with him and was hit three times on the side of the head with a full bottle of champagne and the fellow hit once. She fell over on the floor and died. The man did not come to for an hour. I was left with the corpse and cannot take a chance for a trial. Life to me is very bitter and I will pull down the shades and say good bye. You can claim my property and say as little as possible, but get it. I am awfully sorry for you and our boy, and I have been hustling madly to make your path clear, but fate is against me.

"BOB."

"P. S.—Take Pennsylvania railroad to Easton, Md., then change to B. C. ery one got full excepting Edith and & A. Don't neglect this. The property is valuable."

Foreman Radcliffe, of the coroner's jury, declared himself convinced of the truth of the strange missive and urged the authorities to investigate further into the matter. With all his disclaimer of responsibility, however, Eastman admitted in the letter that he did not dare take the chance of a trial and had decided to "draw the curtains forever."

Present to Grand Chancellor.

There will be on display in Zoeller's window this week a very handsome gold watch, the present of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, to retiring Grand Chancellor Thos. H. Webb, of Duke, N. C. The watch bears the following inscription: "Presented to Thos. H. Webb, P. G. C., by the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias of North Carolina, 1909."

Death of Mr. G. W. Herring.

Following an illness of some time, Mr. G. W. Herring died at 9 o'clock last night at his home, 511 South Sixth street. Mr. Herring was 58 years old and is survived by a wife and two sons, Mr. Luther B. Herring, of Augusta, Ga., and Mr. Walter S. Herring, of Wilmington. The funeral will be from the residence at 10 o'clock Monday morning and the interment will be in Bellevue.

REUNION WELL ATTENDED

Spanish-American War Veterans Held Forth at Carolina Beach.

The reunion of the Spanish-American war veterans of Fort Caswell and Wilmington at Carolina Beach yesterday was marked by a good attendance of soldiers and many others from the city and the celebration was an interesting one. There were present 125 soldiers from Fort Caswell and quite a few from Wilmington. The soldiers came up on the steamer Wilmington yesterday morning and brought with them the post band of 27 pieces, which added decidedly to the reunion exercises. The soldiers returned to the fort last night at 6:30 o'clock on the Madeleine.

Revival at Brooklyn Baptist.

The series of services at Brooklyn Baptist church are continuing with unabated interest, and the pastor, Rev. C. F. Whitlock is accomplishing much through his profound and thoughtful sermons. The revival will continue this week and Rev. T. W. Chambliss, of Wadesboro, a well known and consecrated divine, will arrive today and assist in conducting the meetings throughout the week. Pastor Whitlock's morning subject will be "May We Know That We Will Reach Heaven," and the evening theme, "Does Christianity Pay?"

Atlanta Pullman Service.

The tri-weekly Pullman service over the Seaboard Air Line between Wilmington and Atlanta will be inaugurated this afternoon on train No. 39, leaving at 3:20 P. M. The service will be on incoming and outgoing trains every other day. It is the same service as given by this road last year and is especially convenient for the many patrons of the beach from Georgia during the season.

Two Concerts at Lumina.

The usual two excellent concerts will be given at Lumina today. A cornet solo by Mr. Frank E. Schirch is one of the numbers for the afternoon concert, and at the night concert there is a trio for the flute, cello and piano which will no doubt be very fine. Also at the night concert the orchestra will play a descriptive piece, "A Trip to Buffalo" in which many unique effects will be brought in.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—Winston-Salem, June 25.—Plans have been accepted for a modern seven story bank and office building to be erected at once corner Main and Third streets by Wachovia National Bank.

—Raleigh, June 25.—Commissioner of Insurance J. R. Young, has just received a telegram announcing the conviction of a man by the name of Arthur at Beaufort for burning his house for the insurance. This makes 106 convictions during the ten years that Mr. Young has served the State as Commissioner of Insurance.

—Newton Enterprise: If the weather remains favorable, the wheat threshers will start out about the first of next week. Wheat is selling at $1.50 per bushel. Those who have any to spare will be anxious to get it on the market as soon as possible, and those who are buying flour will be just as anxious to get their wheat threshed.

—Waxhaw Enterprise: Many farmers in this section of the country have not finished planting corn yet, and some have not planted any. On account of so much rain, land that has been prepared for corn will have to be made ready again and the question that will perplex many farmers will be how to get land prepared and finish planting corn and at the same time work out the crop that is already up. After June corn cannot be planted with any reasonable certainty of making hard corn.

—Lenoir Topic: It seems that Mr. J. M. Allred has solved the problem of road improvement, at least for the present, in Caldwell county. Last week when we were having heavy rains every day, the writer had an opportunity to inspect Mr. Allred's road, near Granite Falls, and he found that notwithstanding the heavy traffic over the road there was practivally no mud to be found in the track. The road is kept high and dry in the centre, and the work is accompanied by an occasional use of the split-log drag, a simple and inexpensive device.

—King's Mountain Herald: Fletcher Carson, colored, of Section Master Fortune's gang, has the reputation of being a hearty eater at all times, and last Friday, when the force was at work near Kester's store, Carson agreed to eat four cans of salmon if the other fellows would buy them. The salmon was provided and in addition some sweet crackers. The crackers and three cans were easily put away by Carson before he decided that he had had enough, but he could not attempt the fourth can. From last reports, Carson was still living.

—The Union Farmer, published at Marshville, in speaking of the growth of the Farmers' Union, says it has ben fifteen months since that organization went into Statehood in North Carolina. There were then about 250 local unions in the State. "We now have," says The Union Farmer, "about 700 local unions with an aggregate membership of nearly 15,000. We are yet in our infancy in North Carolina, the organization having been planted in only about half the counties of the State. The State officials are planning for a lively campaign for unionism this Summer. The State organizer is calling for active organizers to take up the work of organization as soon as the work in the cultivation of the crops is over, and a strong pull will be made for 25,000 members by the end of the year.

—Raleigh News and Observer, June 26: It is expected that the State Board of Education will take an early action with regard to the reclamation of Lake Mattamuskeet, in Hyde county. This State Board of Education owns 50,000 of the 120,000 acres of the drainage district in Hyde county, which has already been surveyed and mapped and the plans drawn for the drainage work. Plans are also being carried forward toward the establishment of a drainage district in the vicinity of Moycock, Currituck county. The survey has already been made of this area and it has been shown to be practicable to drain the area desired It is expected that actual work will be begun in this district at a very early date. In the Piedmont region plans are being made to drain overflowed lands situated on Clark's Creek, of Lincoln and Catawba counties. The Geological and Economic Survey have arranged with the drainage division of the United States Department of Agriculture to send an engineer to this district to plan out the work. The reclamation of this overflowed land will bring under cultivation some of the most fertile land of that section of Lincoln county. A new type of drainage will also be planned while the engineer is in that district, and that is the tile drainage of farm lands. Little or none of this type of drainage has been undertaken in that section of the Piedmont, and after the work is under way, arrangements are to be made to hold a Farmers' Institute so that practical instruction can be given in tile drainage illustrated by the work going on. This work in drainage is but the beginning of what in the next few years will be carried on over many sections of North Carolina, and will result in the reclamation of thousands of acres of land which are now either not cultivated at all or raise but scant crops.

Conquering the Demon

MORPHINE, WHISKEY, CIGARETTES

The demon of drink slays his thousands every year; the slaves to morphine and other drugs number thousands more, while the cigarette fiend with shattered nerves and wrecked body is here in almost countless numbers. Many of them would gladly be rid of the awful curse that holds them in bonds, but do not know where to turn for relief. We have the cure. We can make the drunkard sober, the drug fiend a man again, and the tobacco slave a free man. Our treatments have been administered in different sanitariums for years, and have back of them a record that is simply marvelous. We know we can give relief—permanent relief—to the sufferers; and we are ready to prove our claims to any interested but unpredjudiced inquirer.

Our treatments are based on scientific, known medical facts, and they are endorsed by physicians wherever they have been administered.

We don't want anybody's money without giving value received. We, therefore, make the following unqualified guarantee:

What We Guarantee

We will treat any case of alcoholism or drug addictions and allow patient one month in which to make payment. If at the end of that period he or she is not cured we will not only make no charge for the treatment, but will refund to patient all hotel expenses and railroad fare both ways.

Money talks with most people. We are willing to put money behind our faith in this treatment.

While we, of course, hope for some financial return for money invested in this institution, yet we are also deeply interested in the saving of men and women from the curse of drink and drugs.

Write us for more detailed fnformation.

We Cure the Hard to Cure

For $10.00 we sell a guaranteed Home Cure for all smoking habits.
For $5.00 we cure chewing and snuff habits. Money refunded if not cured.
We respect feelings of patients and treat all information about any case as strictly confidential.

FUTURE OF ITALIANS LIES IN AGRICULTURE

Visit to Agricultural Colony of St. Helena, as Described by Eminent Italian Editor of New York—Splendid Results—Happy and Contented People.

Readers of the local papers will recall the recent visit of a party of prominent New Yorkers to the colonies of the Carolina Trucking Development Company in this section. A member of the party was Mr. F. L. Frugone, editor of the "Bollettino della Sera," a leading daily Italian newspaper of New York, which prints the following very interesting article with reference to the visit here:

The "Bolletino della Sera," which for years and years has fought continually for the scattering of Italians from the congested quarters of the large cities of America—districts which has always urged our Italian farmers to go out into the country, the only sure and lasting road to safety and good fortune for them, is now glad to be able to point out to its readers a definite instance and example of what Italians can do when well guided and given the opportunity to escape from the typrannical yoke of life in the city.

About four years ago Mr. Hugh MacRae, a banker of North Carolina, wealthy, influential and widely esteemed in business in New York, realizing the immensity of the unutilized lands in the South, conceived the idea of founding colonies there, of Italians, Germans, Poles, Greeks, etc.

Following out his idea, Mr. MacRae at once sent various agents to Europe for Italians. Among them was Lawyer Ernesto Valentini, who made three trips to Polesine or Province of Rovigo, where he made a wise choice of Venetian peasants. These people, without money or means of any kind upon their arrival in New York, were at once taken to a splendid woodland country near the village of Burgaw, some 20 miles from the Atlantic coast and from the City of Wilmington, N. C. A number of small neat houses had been built for the first emigrants, who as soon as they were lodged were employed in clearing their ten-acre plots of ground at a weekly salary paid them by the company for their support. After a few months these woods, under the strong and unflinching arm of the Venetian farmer, were transformed into fertile productive farms abounding in all the fruits of Mother Earth, such as potatoes, beans, peas, tomatoes, lettuce, strawberries, alfalfa, etc.

These products are sent through to the markets of New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago on long fast freight trains. Crops are gathered three and sometimes four times a year, because of the excellence of the climate for cultivation.

He who reads this simple and hasty description of the colony must not think that everything went as smooth and easy as oil for the founder, Mr. MacRae, and his collaborators who form the Carolina Trucking Development Company. On the contrary, vast and almost insurmountable difficulties presented themselves on all sides. In the first place, there was the opposition of the people of the South against Italian emigration in the State because of the prejudice existing against our people caused by the so-called Black Hand, etc.; secondly, the necessity and difficulty of obtaining laws from the Legislature for the admission of the immigrants; and in the third place, the systemization and drainage of the lands.

It will suffice to say that the topographical maps alone cost about $70,000 and that lawyers fees amounted to some $30,000, besides the expenses of building houses for the settlers and supporting them from the time of their arrival till the gathering of the first crop.

There are now about 300 colonists in all, men, women, and children at the St. Helena Colony.

Thus for years after its foundation, the Italian Colony of St. Helena had to be presented and made known, so to speak, to the world.

Therefore, at the advice of Mr. Di Palma Castiglione, the active, conscientious and honest director of the Labor Bureau for Italians in New York, (who contributed much to its success), the above mentioned Mr. Valentini, our director F. L. Frugone, his daughter Marie, and Miss Alice Bennett (an able magazine writer who for many years has been deeply interested in all the problems in connection with Italian immigration) were invited by Mr. MacRae's company to visit the colony.

Accordingly, under the guidance of Mr. Nicholas C. Adossides, the manager of Hugh MacRae & Co.'s New York offiffice, we left New York Friday morning, June 4th, and arrived Saturday morning by the Atlantic Coast Line express at the little station of St. Helena. To be sure our Colony has its own railroad station.

To meet us at the station were Maj. Van C. Lucas, a member of the company who for four years has been the life and spirit of the Colony; Mr. Hugh Overstreet, the superintendent of whom the Italians are very fond, and Mr. VanLeuven, the vice president and active manager of the company.

After the customary introduction and hand-shaking, we started on foot to visit each house of the colonists. First, we met the charming and polite little Maria, a Venetian, daughter of Mr. Ettore Tammasia. This pretty and intelligent girl has learned to speak English in a very short time and being anxious to study she will doubtless be the first schoolma'am of the village.

We then visited the stores of the Co-operative Italiana di Consumo, a society formed among the Venetian farmers for the sale of everything they may need, at cost price.

At the homes of the colonists, we were greeted with open-hearted cordiality and cheer by the mothers and wives, all surrounded by beautiful and healthy children of both sexes, all rosy cheeked and happy, recalling by sad contrast the thousands of children of our countrymen, all pale and thin, living crowded in awful rooms of the tenements, very death holes in the Italian quarters of New York City, where thousands of consumptives die yearly.

We saw the clean little church for which the Italian families had asked from the beginning, which is under the patronage of St. Joseph, and in charge of which is Rev. Father Umberto Donato.

At various centres of the settlers' houses, we saw brick ovens used by the families for baking bread and other foods.

On every side, one could see nothing but stretches of well cultivated gardens. And one's mind and heart rejoiced to think that before long all these good, quiet and modest brothers of ours will be reaping the fruits of hard but honest labors and will have the wealth and good fortune which they never expected to have when they left their homes in Italy, poor and with hardly a penny.

They are the forerunners of a long line of strong workers of the land who will point out the road of moral and material welfare which only the rich, fertile, flourishing lands of the Southern States (left for half a century useless from the emancipation of negro slaves) can give.

After examining all things minutely, we left in carriages for the other colonies, which are not so far advanced as the Italian settlement. Having ridden over 30 miles, we arrived at the beautiful City of Wilmington, where we spent the evening and Sunday as the guests of Mr. MacRae, being received and entertained with the perfection of true Southern hospitality by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Parsley and their daughter, Miss Julia. Mrs. Parsley is a sister of Mr. MacRae.

Mr. Hugh MacRae and his company, now that they have surmounted all of the difficulties, want to interest the big capitalists of America in the enterprise of colonizing the South on a large scale. And this was the scope of our visit to the Colony of St. Helena.

We were introduced to the most influential persons and those most interested in the colonization of the South, and all were very anxious for our opinion on the results of the important and beneficial enterprise of Mr. MacRae.

It is well for the Italians to know that all business people who are looking ahead are watching Mr. MacRae's colonization projects with open eyes, and ready to follow the example as soon as they see that it is successful, which, according to our opinion, is already assured.

The contract between Mr. MacRae's company and each colonist family is very liberal and advantageous, and has been scrupulously kept by both parties. The profits from the sale of products are divided into two parts, one goes to the colonist for his support and use, and the other to the company in payment of the land and house, in such a way that in a few years each family becomes owner of the piece of land.

The most perfect harmony exists among the numerous colonists and the company. Never has any trouble, conflict or fray befallen them since the foundation of this Colony, whose future is so promising and which shall be the guide and model for hundreds of other agricultural colonies that will without fail spring up in other localities of this great American country.

Our only firm desire is that all organizers of new colonies will cling to the methods of the MacRae Company and follow its example in order to avoid expansion and fatal errors which would lead to irreparable ruin.

"'It's all for the little girl!' she cried. 'More than her life depends upon it. We must get her away from him.'

"She saw it was her only course and went where her heart was calling."

The lieutenant met the look of appeal in the trader's eyes and nodded to imply his complete understanding and approval.

"We love some women for their goodness, others we love for their frailness, but there never was one who combined the two like her, and now that I knew she loved me I began to believe again there was a God somewhere. I'd never seen the youngster, so she led me in where it was sleeping, and I remember my boots made such a devil of a thumping on the floor that she laid her slim white finger on her lips and smiled at me. All the fingers in the world began to choke at my throat and all the blood in me commenced to pound at my heart when I looked on that little sleeping kiddie. The tears began to roll out of my eyes, and because they had been dry for four years they scalded like melted metal. That was the only time I ever wept. The sight of her baby did it.

"'I love her already,' I whispered, 'and I'll spend my life making her happy and making a lady of her,' which clinched what wavering doubt the mother had, and she began to plan quickly, the fear coming on her of a sudden that our scheme might fail. I was for riding away with both of them that night, back through the streets of Mesa and up into the hills, where I'd have held them single handed against man or devil, but she wouldn't hear of it.

"'We must go away,' she said, 'a long way from here, where the world won't find us and the little one can

"Leaving the wild country behind, I came into a region I didn't know."

grow to womanhood without knowing. She must never learn who her father was or what her mother did. We will start all over, you and I and the baby, and forget. Do you love me well enough to do it?'

"I uttered a cry and took her in my arms, the arms that had ached for her all those years. Then I kissed her for the first time."

The old man tried to light his pipe, which had gone out, but his fingers shook so that he dropped the match.

"Her plan was for me to take the youngster away that night and for her to join us later, because pursuit was certain, and three could be traced where one might disappear. She would follow when the opportunity offered. I saw that he had instilled a terror into her and that she feared him like death, but as I thought it over her scheme seemed feasible, so I agreed. I was to ride west that hour with the sleeping babe and conceal myself at place we selected, while she would say that the little one had wandered away and been lost in the canyon or anything else to throw Bennett off. After a time she would join us. Well, the little girl never waked when I took her in my arms nor when the mother broke down again and talked to me like a crazy woman.

"I traveled hard that night and swapped horses at daylight. Then, leaving the wild country behind, I came into a region I didn't know and found a Mexican woman who tended the child for me, for I was close by the place where Merridy was to come. Every night I went into the village in hopes that some word had arrived, and I waited patiently for a week. Then I got the blow. I heard it from the loafers around the little postoffice first, but it dazed me so I wouldn't believe it till I borrowed the paper and read the whole story, with the type dancing and leaping before me. It took some hours for it to seep in even after that, and for years I recalled every word of the d——d lie as if it had been branded on me with hot irons. They called it a shocking crime, the most brutal murder California had ever known, and in the headlines was my name in letters that struck me between the eyes like a hammer. Mrs. Dan Bennett had been foully murdered by me in a fit of sudden jealousy, and I had disappeared with the baby! The husband had returned unexpectedly to find her dying, so he said, but too far gone to call for help and with barely sufficient strength to tell him who did it and how! Then the paper went on with the tale of my courting her and her turning me down for Bennett. It told how I had gone off alone up into the the hills, turning into a bear that nobody, man or child, could approach. It said I had brooded there all this time till the mania got uppermost and so came down to wreak my vengeance. They never even did me the credit of calling me crazy. I was a fend incarnate, a beast without soul and a lot of things like that—and, remember, I had never harmed a living thing in all my life. However, that wasn't what hurt. What turned me into a dull, dead, suffering thing was the knowledge that she was gone. For hours I couldn't get beyond that fact. Then came the realization that Bennett had done it, for I reasoned that he had dragged a hint of the truth from her by very force of the fear he held her in—and slain her. God! The awful rage that came over me! But there was nothing to do. I had sworn to guard the little one, so I couldn't take vengeance on him. I couldn't go back and prove my innocence, for that would give the child to him.

"What a night I spent! The next day I saw I had been indicted by the grand jury and was a wanted man. From a distance I watched myself become an outlaw; watched the county put a price upon my head, which Bennett doubled; watched public opinion rise to such a heat that posses began to scour the mountains. What I noted in particular was a statement in the paper that 'the sorrowing husband takes his bereavement with the quiet courage which marks a brave man!' It happened that the Mexican woman couldn't read and talked little. Still, I knew they'd find me soon—it couldn't be otherwise—so I made another run for it, swearing an oath, however, before I left that I'd come back and have that gambler's heart.

"It was lucky I went, for they uncovered my sign the next day, and the country where I'd hidden blazed like a field of dry grass. They were close on my heels, and they closed in from every quarter. But, pshaw, I know the woods like an Indian, and the wild things were my friends again, which would have made it play if I'd been alone, but a girl child of three was harder to manage. So I cowered and skulked day after day like a thief or the murderer they thought me, working always farther into the hidden places, traveling by night with the little one asleep on my bosom, by day playing with her in some leafy glen, with my pursuers so close behind that for weeks I never slept, and my love for the child increased daily till it became almost an insanity.

"We had close squeezes many times, but I finally won, in spite of the fact that they tracked us clear to the edge of the desert, for I had hit for the state line, knowing that Nevada was a wilderness and feeling that I'd surely lose them there. And I did. But in doing it I nearly lost Merridy. You see, the constant travel and hardship was too much for a prattling baby, and she fell sick from the heat, the dust and thirst.

"I was bound for the nearest ranch or camp where a woman could be found; but, as luck would have it, I went through without trying. I had gone farther from men and things, however, than I thought, and this return pursuit was a million times worse than the other, for I couldn't go fast enough to shake Death, who ran with his hand on my cantle or rode on my horse's rump. It was then I found Alluna. She was with a hunting party of Pah-Utes, who knew nothing of me nor of the white man's affairs and cared less, and when I saw the little squaw I rode my horse up beside her, laid the sick child in her arms, then tumbled out of the saddle. They had a harder job to pull me through than they did to save Merridy.

"The little one was playing around several days before I got back my reason. Meanwhile the party had moved north, taking us with them, and, as it happened, just missing a posse who were returning from the desert.

"When I was able to get about I told Alluna that I must be going, but as I told her I watched her face and saw the sign I wanted. The white girl had clutched at her like she had at me, and she couldn't give her up, so I made a dicker with her old man. It took all the money I had to buy that squaw, but I knew the kiddie must have a woman's care, and the three of us started out soon after alone and broke.

"Since then we three have never rested. I left them once in Idaho and went back to Mesa, riding all the way, mostly by night, but Bennett was gone. He'd run down mighty fast after Merridy died till he had a killing in his place. Instead of stopping to face it out the yellow in him rose to the surface, and he left before sunup, as I had left, making a clean get-away, too, for there was no such hullabaloo raised about killing a man as there was about—the other. So my trip was all for nothing.

"I figured it wouldn't be right to either you or Necia to let you go it blind, and so I came in to tell you this whole thing and to give myself up."

Gale stopped, then poured himself another drink.

"To give yourself up?" echoed Burrell vaguely. "How do you mean?" He had sat like one in a trance during the long recital, only his eyes alive.

"I'm under indictment for murder," said the trader. "I have been for fifteen years, and there's no chance in the world for me to prove my innocence."

OBITUARY.

Died suddenly at Scott's Hill, May 27th, 1909, Mrs. M. E. McClammy, aged 61 years, 2 months, and 10 days She was born in Wilmington, N. C., daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. W. T. Vann and is survived by her husband and her brother, Mr. J. T. Vann, of Charlotte, N. C., her children having all preceded her to that glorious land of which today she is an enraptured inhabitant, if the most blameless Christian life and the most absolute trust in God can warrant that holy and comforting assurance.

She was the most patient and generous being I have ever known. She rejoiced in the success of all and sympathized deeply with the sorrows of all humanity. She banished gloom with the radiance of her shining soul and made that home a palace of light, which now is wrapped in eternal gloom. Like that great Christian, the martyred McKinley, she was Christ-like in every act of life, never complaining, never reviling and surely they wear today crowns of gold, beaten and fashioned by heavenly artificers for Christ's most loving and trusting followers. In the midst of seeming health, the summons came with startling suddenness. Calling her with an anguished voice, to which even death might have yielded, she made no response, she gave no sign, so swift was the passage of her soul to the fields of light. If I owned the incomputable wealth of mountains and of seas, if I could call my own the worlds that flash in jeweled splendor from the crown of night, I would give them all, but to have her come and tell me of her infinite peace and her eternal love. From members of all churches and people of all classes have come the tenderest condolences, the most unstinted praises of her exalted character, but from former ministers of her own church, of which for 36 years she was a faithful member, not one Methodist minister has paid the slightest tribute to her memory. But it matters not. No forgetfulness can increase the pain of a surcharged and bursting heart, not any one, but an angel from God himself relieve it, when I know that in her death the world has lost, one of the purest Christians, one of the noblest women, that ever lived, and I, all that I had upon earth, that bound me to it.

FUTURE OF ITALIANS LIES IN AGRICULTURE

Visit to Agricultural Colony of St. Helena, as Described by Eminent Italian Editor of New York—Splendid Results—Happy and Contented People.

Readers of the local papers will recall the recent visit of a party of prominent New Yorkers to the colonies of the Carolina Trucking Development Company in this section. A member of the party was Mr. F. L. Frugone, editor of the "Bollettino della Sera," a leading daily Italian newspaper of New York, which prints the following very interesting article with reference to the visit here:

The "Bolletino della Sera," which for years and years has fought continually for the scattering of Italians from the congested quarters of the large cities of America—districts which has always urged our Italian farmers to go out into the country, the only sure and lasting road to safety and good fortune for them, is now glad to be able to point out to its readers a definite instance and example of what Italians can do when well guided and given the opportunity to escape from the typrannical yoke of life in the city.

About four years ago Mr. Hugh MacRae, a banker of North Carolina, wealthy, influential and widely esteemed in business in New York, realizing the immensity of the unutilized lands in the South, conceived the idea of founding colonies there, of Italians, Germans, Poles, Greeks, etc.

Following out his idea, Mr. MacRae at once sent various agents to Europe for Italians. Among them was Lawyer Ernesto Valentini, who made three trips to Polesine or Province of Rovigo, where he made a wise choice of Venetian peasants. These people, without money or means of any kind upon their arrival in New York, were at once taken to a splendid woodland country near the village of Burgaw, some 20 miles from the Atlantic coast and from the City of Wilmington, N. C. A number of small neat houses had been built for the first emigrants, who as soon as they were lodged were employed in clearing their ten-acre plots of ground at a weekly salary paid them by the company for their support. After a few months these woods, under the strong and unflinching arm of the Venetian farmer, were transformed into fertile productive farms abounding in all the fruits of Mother Earth, such as potatoes, beans, peas, tomatoes, lettuce, strawberries, alfalfa, etc.

These products are sent through to the markets of New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago on long fast freight trains. Crops are gathered three and sometimes four times a year, because of the excellence of the climate for cultivation.

He who reads this simple and hasty description of the colony must not think that everything went as smooth and easy as oil for the founder, Mr. MacRae, and his collaborators who form the Carolina Trucking Development Company. On the contrary, vast and almost insurmountable difficulties presented themselves on all sides. In the first place, there was the opposition of the people of the South against Italian emigration in the State because of the prejudice existing against our people caused by the so-called Black Hand, etc.; secondly, the necessity and difficulty of obtaining laws from the Legislature for the admission of the immigrants; and in the third place, the systemization and drainage of the lands.

It will suffice to say that the topographical maps alone cost about $70,000 and that lawyers fees amounted to some $30,000, besides the expenses of building houses for the settlers and supporting them from the time of their arrival till the gathering of the first crop.

There are now about 300 colonists in all, men, women, and children at the St. Helena Colony.

Thus for years after its foundation, the Italian Colony of St. Helena had to be presented and made known, so to speak, to the world.

Therefore, at the advice of Mr. Di Palma Castiglione, the active, conscientious and honest director of the Labor Bureau for Italians in New York, (who contributed much to its success), the above mentioned Mr. Valentini, our director F. L. Frugone, his daughter Marie, and Miss Alice Bennett (an able magazine writer who for many years has been deeply interested in all the problems in connection with Italian immigration) were invited by Mr. MacRae's company to visit the colony.

Accordingly, under the guidance of Mr. Nicholas C. Adossides, the manager of Hugh MacRae & Co.'s New York offiffice, we left New York Friday morning, June 4th, and arrived Saturday morning by the Atlantic Coast Line express at the little station of St. Helena. To be sure our Colony has its own railroad station.

To meet us at the station were Maj. Van C. Lucas, a member of the company who for four years has been the life and spirit of the Colony; Mr. Hugh Overstreet, the superintendent of whom the Italians are very fond, and Mr. VanLeuven, the vice president and active manager of the company.

After the customary introduction and hand-shaking, we started on foot to visit each house of the colonists. First, we met the charming and polite little Maria, a Venetian, daughter of Mr. Ettore Tammasia. This pretty and intelligent girl has learned to speak English in a very short time and being anxious to study she will doubtless be the first schoolma'am of the village.

We then visited the stores of the Co-operative Italiana di Consumo, a society formed among the Venetian farmers for the sale of everything they may need, at cost price.

At the homes of the colonists, we were greeted with open-hearted cordiality and cheer by the mothers and wives, all surrounded by beautiful and healthy children of both sexes, all rosy cheeked and happy, recalling by sad contrast the thousands of children of our countrymen, all pale and thin, living crowded in awful rooms of the tenements, very death holes in the Italian quarters of New York City, where thousands of consumptives die yearly.

We saw the clean little church for which the Italian families had asked from the beginning, which is under the patronage of St. Joseph, and in charge of which is Rev. Father Umberto Donato.

At various centres of the settlers' houses, we saw brick ovens used by the families for baking bread and other foods.

On every side, one could see nothing but stretches of well cultivated gardens. And one's mind and heart rejoiced to think that before long all these good, quiet and modest brothers of ours will be reaping the fruits of hard but honest labors and will have the wealth and good fortune which they never expected to have when they left their homes in Italy, poor and with hardly a penny.

They are the forerunners of a long line of strong workers of the land who will point out the road of moral and material welfare which only the rich, fertile, flourishing lands of the Southern States (left for half a century useless from the emancipation of negro slaves) can give.

After examining all things minutely, we left in carriages for the other colonies, which are not so far advanced as the Italian settlement. Having ridden over 30 miles, we arrived at the beautiful City of Wilmington, where we spent the evening and Sunday as the guests of Mr. MacRae, being received and entertained with the perfection of true Southern hospitality by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Parsley and their daughter, Miss Julia. Mrs. Parsley is a sister of Mr. MacRae.

Mr. Hugh MacRae and his company, now that they have surmounted all of the difficulties, want to interest the big capitalists of America in the enterprise of colonizing the South on a large scale. And this was the scope of our visit to the Colony of St. Helena.

We were introduced to the most influential persons and those most interested in the colonization of the South, and all were very anxious for our opinion on the results of the important and beneficial enterprise of Mr. MacRae.

It is well for the Italians to know that all business people who are looking ahead are watching Mr. MacRae's colonization projects with open eyes, and ready to follow the example as soon as they see that it is successful, which, according to our opinion, is already assured.

The contract between Mr. MacRae's company and each colonist family is very liberal and advantageous, and has been scrupulously kept by both parties. The profits from the sale of products are divided into two parts, one goes to the colonist for his support and use, and the other to the company in payment of the land and house, in such a way that in a few years each family becomes owner of the piece of land.

The most perfect harmony exists among the numerous colonists and the company. Never has any trouble, conflict or fray befallen them since the foundation of this Colony, whose future is so promising and which shall be the guide and model for hundreds of other agricultural colonies that will without fail spring up in other localities of this great American country.

Our only firm desire is that all organizers of new colonies will cling to the methods of the MacRae Company and follow its example in order to avoid expansion and fatal errors which would lead to irreparable ruin.

"'It's all for the little girl!' she cried. 'More than her life depends upon it. We must get her away from him.'

"She saw it was her only course and went where her heart was calling."

The lieutenant met the look of appeal in the trader's eyes and nodded to imply his complete understanding and approval.

"We love some women for their goodness, others we love for their frailness, but there never was one who combined the two like her, and now that I knew she loved me I began to believe again there was a God somewhere. I'd never seen the youngster, so she led me in where it was sleeping, and I remember my boots made such a devil of a thumping on the floor that she laid her slim white finger on her lips and smiled at me. All the fingers in the world began to choke at my throat and all the blood in me commenced to pound at my heart when I looked on that little sleeping kiddie. The tears began to roll out of my eyes, and because they had been dry for four years they scalded like melted metal. That was the only time I ever wept. The sight of her baby did it.

"'I love her already,' I whispered, 'and I'll spend my life making her happy and making a lady of her,' which clinched what wavering doubt the mother had, and she began to plan quickly, the fear coming on her of a sudden that our scheme might fail. I was for riding away with both of them that night, back through the streets of Mesa and up into the hills, where I'd have held them single handed against man or devil, but she wouldn't hear of it.

"'We must go away,' she said, 'a long way from here, where the world won't find us and the little one can

"Leaving the wild country behind, I came into a region I didn't know."

grow to womanhood without knowing. She must never learn who her father was or what her mother did. We will start all over, you and I and the baby, and forget. Do you love me well enough to do it?'

"I uttered a cry and took her in my arms, the arms that had ached for her all those years. Then I kissed her for the first time."

The old man tried to light his pipe, which had gone out, but his fingers shook so that he dropped the match.

"Her plan was for me to take the youngster away that night and for her to join us later, because pursuit was certain, and three could be traced where one might disappear. She would follow when the opportunity offered. I saw that he had instilled a terror into her and that she feared him like death, but as I thought it over her scheme seemed feasible, so I agreed. I was to ride west that hour with the sleeping babe and conceal myself at place we selected, while she would say that the little one had wandered away and been lost in the canyon or anything else to throw Bennett off. After a time she would join us. Well, the little girl never waked when I took her in my arms nor when the mother broke down again and talked to me like a crazy woman.

"I traveled hard that night and swapped horses at daylight. Then, leaving the wild country behind, I came into a region I didn't know and found a Mexican woman who tended the child for me, for I was close by the place where Merridy was to come. Every night I went into the village in hopes that some word had arrived, and I waited patiently for a week. Then I got the blow. I heard it from the loafers around the little postoffice first, but it dazed me so I wouldn't believe it till I borrowed the paper and read the whole story, with the type dancing and leaping before me. It took some hours for it to seep in even after that, and for years I recalled every word of the d——d lie as if it had been branded on me with hot irons. They called it a shocking crime, the most brutal murder California had ever known, and in the headlines was my name in letters that struck me between the eyes like a hammer. Mrs. Dan Bennett had been foully murdered by me in a fit of sudden jealousy, and I had disappeared with the baby! The husband had returned unexpectedly to find her dying, so he said, but too far gone to call for help and with barely sufficient strength to tell him who did it and how! Then the paper went on with the tale of my courting her and her turning me down for Bennett. It told how I had gone off alone up into the the hills, turning into a bear that nobody, man or child, could approach. It said I had brooded there all this time till the mania got uppermost and so came down to wreak my vengeance. They never even did me the credit of calling me crazy. I was a fend incarnate, a beast without soul and a lot of things like that—and, remember, I had never harmed a living thing in all my life. However, that wasn't what hurt. What turned me into a dull, dead, suffering thing was the knowledge that she was gone. For hours I couldn't get beyond that fact. Then came the realization that Bennett had done it, for I reasoned that he had dragged a hint of the truth from her by very force of the fear he held her in—and slain her. God! The awful rage that came over me! But there was nothing to do. I had sworn to guard the little one, so I couldn't take vengeance on him. I couldn't go back and prove my innocence, for that would give the child to him.

"What a night I spent! The next day I saw I had been indicted by the grand jury and was a wanted man. From a distance I watched myself become an outlaw; watched the county put a price upon my head, which Bennett doubled; watched public opinion rise to such a heat that posses began to scour the mountains. What I noted in particular was a statement in the paper that 'the sorrowing husband takes his bereavement with the quiet courage which marks a brave man!' It happened that the Mexican woman couldn't read and talked little. Still, I knew they'd find me soon—it couldn't be otherwise—so I made another run for it, swearing an oath, however, before I left that I'd come back and have that gambler's heart.

"It was lucky I went, for they uncovered my sign the next day, and the country where I'd hidden blazed like a field of dry grass. They were close on my heels, and they closed in from every quarter. But, pshaw, I know the woods like an Indian, and the wild things were my friends again, which would have made it play if I'd been alone, but a girl child of three was harder to manage. So I cowered and skulked day after day like a thief or the murderer they thought me, working always farther into the hidden places, traveling by night with the little one asleep on my bosom, by day playing with her in some leafy glen, with my pursuers so close behind that for weeks I never slept, and my love for the child increased daily till it became almost an insanity.

"We had close squeezes many times, but I finally won, in spite of the fact that they tracked us clear to the edge of the desert, for I had hit for the state line, knowing that Nevada was a wilderness and feeling that I'd surely lose them there. And I did. But in doing it I nearly lost Merridy. You see, the constant travel and hardship was too much for a prattling baby, and she fell sick from the heat, the dust and thirst.

"I was bound for the nearest ranch or camp where a woman could be found; but, as luck would have it, I went through without trying. I had gone farther from men and things, however, than I thought, and this return pursuit was a million times worse than the other, for I couldn't go fast enough to shake Death, who ran with his hand on my cantle or rode on my horse's rump. It was then I found Alluna. She was with a hunting party of Pah-Utes, who knew nothing of me nor of the white man's affairs and cared less, and when I saw the little squaw I rode my horse up beside her, laid the sick child in her arms, then tumbled out of the saddle. They had a harder job to pull me through than they did to save Merridy.

"The little one was playing around several days before I got back my reason. Meanwhile the party had moved north, taking us with them, and, as it happened, just missing a posse who were returning from the desert.

"When I was able to get about I told Alluna that I must be going, but as I told her I watched her face and saw the sign I wanted. The white girl had clutched at her like she had at me, and she couldn't give her up, so I made a dicker with her old man. It took all the money I had to buy that squaw, but I knew the kiddie must have a woman's care, and the three of us started out soon after alone and broke.

"Since then we three have never rested. I left them once in Idaho and went back to Mesa, riding all the way, mostly by night, but Bennett was gone. He'd run down mighty fast after Merridy died till he had a killing in his place. Instead of stopping to face it out the yellow in him rose to the surface, and he left before sunup, as I had left, making a clean get-away, too, for there was no such hullabaloo raised about killing a man as there was about—the other. So my trip was all for nothing.

"I figured it wouldn't be right to either you or Necia to let you go it blind, and so I came in to tell you this whole thing and to give myself up."

Gale stopped, then poured himself another drink.

"To give yourself up?" echoed Burrell vaguely. "How do you mean?" He had sat like one in a trance during the long recital, only his eyes alive.

"I'm under indictment for murder," said the trader. "I have been for fifteen years, and there's no chance in the world for me to prove my innocence."

OBITUARY.

Died suddenly at Scott's Hill, May 27th, 1909, Mrs. M. E. McClammy, aged 61 years, 2 months, and 10 days She was born in Wilmington, N. C., daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. W. T. Vann and is survived by her husband and her brother, Mr. J. T. Vann, of Charlotte, N. C., her children having all preceded her to that glorious land of which today she is an enraptured inhabitant, if the most blameless Christian life and the most absolute trust in God can warrant that holy and comforting assurance.

She was the most patient and generous being I have ever known. She rejoiced in the success of all and sympathized deeply with the sorrows of all humanity. She banished gloom with the radiance of her shining soul and made that home a palace of light, which now is wrapped in eternal gloom. Like that great Christian, the martyred McKinley, she was Christlike in every act of life, never complaining, never reviling and surely they wear today crowns of gold, beaten and fashioned by heavenly artificers for Christ's most loving and trusting followers. In the midst of seeming health, the summons came with startling suddenness. Calling her with an anguished voice, to which even death might have yielded, she made no response, she gave no sign, so swift was the passage of her soul to the fields of light. If I owned the incomputable wealth of mountains and of seas, if I could call my own the worlds that flash in jeweled splendor from the crown of night, I would give them all, but to have her come and tell me of her infinite peace and her eternal love. From members of all churches and people of all classes have come the tenderest condolences, the most unstinted praises of her exalted character, but from former ministers of her own church, of which for 36 years she was a faithful member, not one Methodist minister has paid the slightest tribute to her memory. But it matters not. No forgetfulness can increase the pain of a surcharged and bursting heart, not any one, but an angel from God himself relieve it, when I know that in her death the world has lost, one of the purest Christians, one of the noblest women, that ever lived, and I, all that I had upon earth, that bound me to it.

THE COTTON MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 26.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 2 points on July, which was influenced by a little scattering liquidation, disappointing Liverpool futures and better weather reports but generally 3 to 6 points higher. There appeared to be big overnight buying orders around the ring, spot people supported the near months and shortly after the opening prices sold up to a net gain of 7 to 9 points, with all positions making new higher records for the season. Heavy realizing caused some irregularity later, but the market held within a point or two of the top on bullish spot advices.

The market closed firm and active, with prices net 1 to 13 points higher.

Receipts at the ports today 4,005 bales against 4,762 last week and 7,879 last year; for the week 30,000 bales against 33,505 last week and 57,236 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 616 bales against 1,714 last year.

Spot cotton closed quiet, 10 points higher; middling uplands 11.80; middling gulf 12.05; sales 100 bales. Futures opened steady and closed firm and active.

THE DRY GOODS MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 26.—The dry goods market closed the week very strong Buying are proceeding carfully but are placing large quantities of merchandise under order. Jobbers clearance sales will begin Monday and continue for the balance of the month. Linens are very strong. Burlaps continue quiet and prices are very low. Fine and fancy lace goods ahve been generally opened for the season.

MARKET GOSSIP.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 26.—The stock market today showed plain symptoms of lapsing into summer dullness. Such business as was done originated largely on the floor of the exchange in trading operations among members. Besides the discouraging effort of the heat, a period of dullness in the speculation through the critical period of the making of the country's harvests is customary. The extreme ease of the money market, in spite of the near approach of the July settlements, might prove an incentive to kep up speculation in some circumstances. The heavy receipts of currency from the interior are providing resources to insure the meeting of all requirements on July 1. Borrowing abroad also is pursued with facility. There is no dread apparent that the July payments, estimated over $200,000,000 will not be met with ease. The time money market is called very soft and reflects the expectation that the period of ease will extend for some time into the future. Today's strong bank statement reinforces this expectation. A disturbing effect was caused in today's market by the further relapse in Union Pacific preferred, which sold as low as 100 1-2 compared with 110 on Thursday.

The sluggish drift of the day's price movement left only small changes at the end of the day.

Bonds were steady. Total sales par value, $1,892,000. United States bonds 2s and 3s coupon have declined 1-4, the 4s registered 1-2 and the 4s coupon 3-4 per cent. on call during the week. Total sales today 249,800 shares.

FINANCIAL MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 26.—Money on call nominal. Time loans very soft and dull, sixty days 2 to 2 1-4 per cent., and ninety days 2 to 2 1-2 per cent. six months 3 1-4 to 3 1-2 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 3 1-2 to 4 per cent., sterling exchange firm with actual business in bankers bills at 4.8650 to 4.8660 for sixty day bills and at 4.8800 to 4.8805 for demand. A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. "A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by R. R. Bellamy.

"The Glorious Fourth."

Who hasn't seen the silver-tongued orator of his town mount the platform on a hot Fourth of July day and begin "When, in the course of human events," etc.? Everyone has been among those present on these time-honored occasions.

A splendid picture, illustrating a good, old-fashioned Independence Day meeting, is shown here. It includes a lot of old acquaintances. There is the orator—you can call him by name; the small boy at the corner of the platform who has recently lost a battle with a giant firecracker and is waiting anxiously for the end of the reading and the beginning of the pie-eating contest; the members of the Independent Cornet Ban, who are very important people on a day like this; the staunch patriot radiating heat in the foreground; the good farmer and his good wife who holds a basket that makes you hungry; the parson, the village boss. Anyone can go through the picture and pick them out.

This illustration of a celebration of the Nation's birthday is the work of Samuel Nelson Abbott, and was made for Hart Schffner & Marx. It is shown in the A. David Company's advertising elsewhere in today's paper.

Mrs. Elizabeth Venes Dead.

Mrs. Elizabeth Venes died at the James Walker Memorial Hospital at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning, following an illness of only a few days. The deceased lived on Chesnut street, between 15th and 16th. She was 46 years old and is survived by a daughter, Mrs. A. T. Wilson, of this city. The funeral services will be held from Mr. W. E. Yopp's funeral parlors at 10 o'clock this morning, conducted by Rev. C. F. Whitlock, pastor of Brooklyn Baptist Church, and the interment will be in Bellevue cemetery.

See statement of People's Savings Bank published elsewhere in this paper. 2t

NEW DISTRIBUTING POINT

High Point Furniture Manufacturers Open Warehouse Here.

Through the efforts of Mr. Henderson Cole, of this city, a number of furniture manufacturers of High Point have decided to make Wilmington a distributing point and the three story building, 104 North Water street, has been secured for the warehouse.

The first and third floors will be used as stock rooms and on the second floor will be displayed a full line of samples. Only furniture merchants will be admitted to the second floor and no goods will be sold at retail. The building has sufficient space for the storage of eight or ten car loads of furniture. The goods will be shipped here in car load lots and will be sold for the same price as in High Point.

The new business will be a valuable addition to the large and varied jobbing interests of Wilmington, and is the first new enterprise since the organization of the Greater Wilmington Club, of which Mr. Cole is an enthusiastic member. Mr. Cole will be in charge of the business for the present, until the manufacturers can find a suitable man for manager. Mr. Cole feels confident that a few months will demonstrate the wisdom of enlarging the present warehouse, adding a finishing department and later a manufactory. Two cars of furniture have already arrived and orders can be filled by the middle of the week.

The Wilmington Furniture Company will discontinue its jobbing department and give its entire time to the large and constantly increasing retail business.

WEATHER EXTREMELY WARM.

Extended Over Wide Field Yesterday. Slight Change Today.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Washington, June 26.—A warm wave with a wide field, levying a large toll of prostrations, some fatal, stretched over the whole country today. Out in Phoenix, Ariz., the temperature climbed to 100 in the weather bureau thermometers, which are always lower than the street registers while Washington, Baltimore, and Lynchburg, Va., scored the highest honors in this direction in the East with 94, official, each.

In the Atlantic States north of Maryland, the hot wave has slightly moderated and a slight lowering of the temperature is probable in the Atlantic States north of Virginia tomorrow. But the weather bureau announcement tonight conveys the depressing forecast: "No decided change is indicated in the temperature conditions in the Eastern States during the next 48 hours." At scattered points in all sections a modicum of relief was brought today by showers and thunderstorms.

In Washington today a maximum of 104 was reached in the unofficial thermometers in the down-town district, and there were four cases of heat prostration.
